'Reich Stands Behind Us,' Danzig Nazi Warns Poles

European Affairs

ITALIAN FOREIGN MINISTER Ciano is expected to urge upon Germany a peaceful solution of the Danzig question when he meets German Foreign Minister Ribbentrop tomorrow in Salzburg.—Page 6.

Forster's Speech

By the Associated Press

Free City of Danzig, Aug. 10.—The Nazi leader in Danzig, Albert Forster, at a vast outdoor protest meeting tonight hurled defiance at Poland and appealed to citizens of other nations aligned against Germany to prevent a war—but gave no hint of the plans of Fuehrer Hitler.

He said he had no startling disclosures to make.

The fiery spokesman, who hastened back to Danzig yesterday with full knowledge of Hitler's views gained in long interviews, declarred, however, that "Poland may rest assured" Germany and the Fuehrer "are determined in the event of attack to stand at our side."

As for Danzig, he asserted, the Free City was prepared to defend its rights "with its blood."

Poles Not Shaken

(Responsible quarters in Warsaw said the speech in no way changed fundamental questions at issue despite its "harsh tone and decidedly anti-Polish character," and that its general tone indicated Hitler had not yet decided on any definite move.)

Nazis estimated 40,000 persons—many of them uniformed storm troopers—stood in the square before Forster and that 60,000 others were gathered under loud speakers in Free City territory.

But if Forster gave no hint of Hitler's plans, he left no doubt of his ultimate intentions.

"The Danzig population," he declared, "believes implicitly that the hour of liberation is coming and that the Free City will return to the Reich.

"The Danzigers look with especial veneration upon their Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler, of whom they are convinced that he will fulfill their wish and thereby again give the right of self-determination that place which was denied it in 1919.

"My beloved Danzigers, in this hour we cannot do anything better than to pledge solemnly to stick together, come what may, that we shall ward off every attack upon this sacred soil determinedly with the weapons at our hands and that we shall execute every command of our Fuehrer unquestioningly.

"May the day not be far distant when we convene here not for a protest meeting, but to celebrate the reunion of Danzig with the Reich."

"Pfui!" Yelled at Poles

Forster's protest was a violent attack on Polish newspapers and officials for threatening to "shoot Danzig to bits" with artillery if she persists in her course of wishing incorporation into Germany and for making other threats.

Loud "pfuis" greeted his barbs at Poland.

But his main theme was an indirect appeal to citizens of Britain, France and the United States to recognize that "Danzig is German."

The argument to which he returned again and again was that there was no sense in sending English and French youths into battle to save Danzig for Poland when, according to the German contention, the city belongs historically and by choice to Germany.

He quoted many Englishmen and English and American newspapers to the effect that the Danzig cause is just.

The Nazi crowd received the thrusts with great enthusiasm.

'In Sickness and in Health,' Says Bride to Snite in Iron Lung

Paralysis Victim Wed to Girl Who Stuck by Him

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 10.—Fred Snite, jr., who has lived in "iron lungs" for three years and four months, married today a pretty brunette, who cheered and comforted him during his valorous struggle to shake off the shackles of infantile paralysis.

The unheralded ceremony—it surprised relatives and amazed friends the smiling "boiler kid" has made on three continents—was performed in the home of Snite's banker father in suburban River Forest.

Young Snite and Miss Teressa Larkin, of Dayton, Ohio, were married by the Rev. J. W. Morrison in the large living room in the presence of a small gathering of friends before a fireplace draped with white and decorated with flowers.

Snite lay full length in the lung in which he has slept and rested most of the time since the spring of 1936. The bride stood beside him, clad in a knee-length white chiffon dress. She carried orchids.

The bridegroom observed his twenty-ninth birthday July 31; the bride is 25.

A wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony and the newlyweds then set off on a brief honeymoon in the $15,000 trailer specially constructed to facilitate Snite's travels. The plans called for cruising about neighboring Oak Park and returning home to receive guests in the evening.

Young Fred epitomized the day's experiences with the radiant declaration, "I've got a new boss now, and I'm very happy."

The bride, tall and slender, posed graciously for photographers, chatted with her new father-in-law and replied to questions with an acknowledgment that she had been in love with Fred for some time and that "he gave me the ring in Florida last winter."

TERESSA LARKIN

As disclosed by the father, Fred became acquainted with Miss Larkin when she and his sister were roommates at Georgian Court College, Lakewood, N. J., some seven years ago. The sister, Mary Loretta Snite, is now Mrs. Terrence J. Dillon, of River Forest.

Missing Md. Man Linked to Old Mystery

Illinois Woman Says He's Her Husband, Who Vanished in 1922

By the United Press

Highland Lake, Ill., Aug. 10.—Mrs. Elizabeth Dally said tonight she had been notified by Salisbury, Md., authorities that a man reported drowned in Maryland was her husband, who disappeared in Germany in 1922.

Mrs. Dally said identification was made through a passport recovered among Dally's papers on the beach at Ocean City, Md.

Dally and a woman identified as his wife, Irma, drove to the beach yesterday. Later Mrs. Irma Dally was found semiconscious on the beach. She told authorities her husband was in the water, but efforts to find him were unsuccessful.

Dally, an executive of the International Harvester Co., vanished in 1922, in Hamburg, Germany, leaving his wife and two children. His daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Dally Wurth, read of the reported drowning yesterday and asked for a description of the victim.

2 Fliers Feared Dead in 2,000-Ft. Plunge Into Sea

Hyannis, Mass., Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Two civilian fliers in a small private plane plunged 2,000 feet into the ocean off Craigville Beach here late today and were believed killed.

The accident occurred about a mile off shore and was witnessed by thousands of bathers.

Girl's Slayer Saved From Florida Mob

Lockup Surrounded, Bogus Talent Scout Rushed to New Cell

By the United Press.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Aug. 10.—Threats of mob violence tonight prompted West Palm Beach police to hide a smooth-talking "talent scout"—confessed attack-killer of a pretty high school dramatics student—in an undisclosed jail.

Sheriff W. Hiram Lawrence supervised the sudden transfer after announcing the slayer had made a detailed confession of the murder.

The slayer, a man of many aliases, told officials his real name was Thomas McBride Cochran and that he was 29 years old. He was questioned two hours under heavy guard in the sheriff's office before being taken out of town by Lawrence.

Companion Held 3 Days

He told the officers he killed Frances Ruth Dunn, 17, by hitting her with a hammer and then stabbing her early Tuesday. Jean Bolton, 17-year-old tiny blonde singer who left Miami with Frances and Cochran, escaped from the confessed killer this morning after being held captive three days.

Tom Riggs, county jailer here, said about 400 men gathered at the jail late in the afternoon. But Lawrence, instead of taking Cochran from his office to the jail, placed Cochran under guard of two deputies and drove away.

It was thought Cochran might have been taken to the Miami Jail.

Did It to Spite Actress

When the angered gathering at the jail learned Lawrence had moved the prisoner, it gradually dispersed.

For an obscure reason, the self-styled movie scout blamed his troubles on an actress he met in

L.S.U. Youth Leader, Husband Of Smith Aide, Kills Himself

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 10.—George C. Heidelberg, middle-aged National Youth administrator at Louisiana State University and husband of Dr. James Monroe Smith's private secretary, died tonight—an apparent suicide, for which police offered no explanation.

Heidelberg, a former railroad man, who had a comfortable position at L. S. U., died in Baton Rouge General Hospital three hours after he fired a bullet through his head at his home.

Heidelberg had never been connected with the scandals sweeping the university, although his department had been under investigation, as had all offices of the school.

United States District Attorney Rene A. Viosca, in New Orleans, and WPA Investigator Paul Hansen, said Heidelberg had never been questioned and had never appeared before a Federal grand jury.

Neither had he been summoned before the East Baton Rouge parish grand jury here. But Mrs. Heidelberg, private secretary to Dr. Smith, former L. S. U. president who now is under 41 indictments and charges, had been questioned by the parish grand jury in two sessions.

She said she refused to type the minutes of L. S. U. board meeting which Dr. Smith had taken because they were altered. It was believed her testimony was largely instrumental in several indictments returned against the resigned educator.

When Dr. Smith was replaced by Dr. Paul M. Hebert, Mrs. Heidelberg was retained as secretary.

Virginians Crack D. C. Defense Line

Maryland Troops Driven Back in Realistic Sham Fight On Bull Run Field

By John G. Norris.
A Staff Correspondent.

Manassas, Va., Aug. 10.—It was Maryland against Virginia today in a hot fight across Bull Run—and when the smoke cleared away the Old Dominion had driven the Free Staters several hundred yards back toward Washington.

Rapidly whipping his Twenty-ninth Division into shape for the big "war" next week, when the Third Corps tackles a streamlined Regular Army division, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckford sent the Fifty-fourth Maryland Brigade into action against the Ninety-first Brigade of Virginia.

The Virginians, dressed in blue denim, attacked from the west. Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, commander of the Ninety-first, threw part of his men at the center of the khaki-clad Marylanders, who were straddling the Lee Highway along the little stream for which two bloody Civil War battles are named in Northern histories. Waller also started an enveloping movement around the Maryland left.

Smoke Screens Movements

The "battle" was the largest and most realistic yet. Airplanes of the 104th Maryland Observation Squadron were divided between the two forces, and kept their respective headquarters informed of the movements of the enemy. Smoke was used extensively to screen the movements of both sides, wire barriers were thrown up and rifle fire burst periodically all along the lines.

As a halt was called shortly before noon, the Maryland brigade, under Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock had been driven across the old stone bridge. Some of the observers, however, declared the battle a draw, inasmuch as Woodcock's men, who were defending Washington, still were strongly entrenched on the hills back of Bull Run.

Supporting the Fifty-fourth Brigade in the battle, were the 75's of the 110th Field Artillery, Maryland National Guard, and a battalion of 155 mm. artillery from Pennsylvania. The Virginians had similar artillery support.

Marylanders Take Prisoners

Individual honors of the day, however, went to a Maryland patrol of six men, headed by Sergt. Wilbert Reinhart, of Frederick. They captured three officers and 20 men of the Virginia infantry and brought them into camp.

Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the First Army, arrived in camp tonight. Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, Third Corps commander, entertained at dinner for the visitor, who is in general charge of the maneuvers. The northern phase of the First Army war games, which Drum directly supervises, begins tomorrow near Plattsburg, N. Y.

Victor McLaglen Revealed as User Of Gland Extract

Los Angeles, Aug. 10 (AP).—Victor McLaglen, portrayer of virile screen roles, has been taking monkey gland injections for a long time.

The information was contained in a deposition disclosed today by S. S. Hahn, attorney for Dr. S. S. Sonneland. The physician is suing McLaglen for $2,789.

Dr. Sonneland asserted McLaglen needed the "shots" to build up his strength.

In the deposition, however, McLaglen declared he took them mainly because the doctor was a good friend.

"If you didn't need these shots for the purpose intended by the doctor," McLaglen was asked, "why did you let him give them to you practically every week?"

"Well," he replied, "the doctor said they would improve my complexion."

Politics Open To 300,000 U.S. Workers

All Outside Civil Service; Must Act Independently of Parties, Says Murphy

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer.

As a result of the Hatch law the Government's 915,000 employes are divided into two groups, those who are permitted to express their political preferences publicly and those who may divulge it only in private conversation, Attorney General Murphy ruled yesterday.

Justice Department officials, meanwhile, plan to confer in the next few days with experts of the Civil Service Commission to try to determine whether the act prohibits Government employes from holding elective offices in nearby Maryland and Virginia towns.

The 300,000 non-civil service Government employes, Murphy declared, may talk publicly on political subjects—so long as they do not do so as part of an organized political campaign. They may make radio speeches and write articles. Murphy quoted a statement to this effect from President Roosevelt's message to Congress on the Hatch bill.

Cites Civil Service Rules

He pointed out that "civil service employes are required by the civil service rules to confine their opinions on political subjects to private expression."

The discrimination between the two classes of employes, Murphy said, is due to the failure of the Hatch bill to follow precisely the civil service rules. Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, author of the bill, has explained that it simply incorporated the civil service rules, extending these rules to all Government personnel except top policy-making officials.

Section 9 (a) of the Hatch bill, which purports to make this extension, retains to non-civil service employes the right to "express their opinions on all political subjects." It does not say, Murphy pointed out, that they must express their opinions "privately."

Refers to President's Message

The President, in his message to Congress on the Hatch bill, made no reference to the discrimination between civil service and non-civil service employes. The excerpt from his message referred to by Murphy follows:

"I have been asked whether they (Government employes) would lose their positions if they should merely express their opinion or preference publicly—orally, by radio, or in writing—without doing so as part of an organized political campaign. The answer is no."

Murphy's statement was in the nature of a brief explanation of the Hatch law—although he made no attempt to answer the numerous individual questions which have been raised about its application.

He pointed out that there are two provisions of the act which affect Government employes—Section 2, and Section 9 (a). The former sec-

Conservatives Assailed

By the United Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 10.—President Roosevelt warned in a message to the Young Democrats' national convention tonight that if the Democratic Party in 1940 nominates conservative or "lip-service candidates on a straddle-bug platform," he will find it "impossible to have any active part in such an unfortunate suicide of the old Democratic Party."

Ten thousand delegates, jammed into Duquesne Gardens for the opening sessions, listened attentively to the reading of a letter written by Mr. Roosevelt to Pitt Tyson Maner, of Montgomery, Ala., president of the Young Democrats.

"If we nominate conservative candidates or lip-service candidates on a straddle-bug platform," Mr. Roosevelt's letter said, "I personally, for my own self-respect and because of my long service to, and belief in, liberal democracy, will find it impossible to have any active part in such an unfortunate suicide of the old Democratic Party."

Further Course Unclear

While the listeners contemplated what course the President might take personally in the next campaign if the Democrats did not nominate "liberals" to head the national ticket in the Presidential race, the letter quickly added:

"I do not anticipate that any such event will take place, for I believe that the (1940) convention will see the political wisdom as well as the national wisdom, of giving to the voters of the United States an opportunity to maintain the practice and policy of moving forward with a liberal and humanitarian program."

As Maner read Mr. Roosevelt's letter, he was interrupted frequently by cheering, and the President's condemnation of "lip-service candidates" touched off a one-minute demonstration. When Maner finished, some of the delegates paraded briefly.

Pepper Is Keynoter

President Roosevelt's letter made no reference to the third-term issue, but United States Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, in the keynote address to the convention tonight, said:

"Irrespective of a third term for Mr. Roosevelt himself, the Young Democrats of America demand a third term for Roosevelt's ideas—that is the keynote of this convention."

"The Democratic Party will fail," Mr. Roosevelt warned in his letter "if it goes conservative next year, or if it is led by people who can offer naught but fine phrases.

"Last winter, in speaking at the Jackson Day dinner, I referred to the sad state the country would be in if it had to choose between a Democratic tweedle-dum and a Republican tweedle-dee. I want to amend that simile, so let me put it this way: The Democratic Party will not survive as an effective force in the Nation if the voters have to choose between a Republican tweedle-dum and a Democratic tweedle-dummer."

The Nation slips backwards, "sometimes a few feet and often many miles," when a Democratic administration is followed by a

Hughes Plans Hop to France In Big Substratosphere Plane

His Sealed Craft Is Capable of Carrying 20 Passengers

A substratosphere dash to France is planned by Howard Hughes, round-the-world flier, officials of the Civil Aeronautics Authority revealed yesterday.

Hughes applied several days ago for permission to make the flight in his new sealed cabin plane, a Boeing 307, officials of the authority said.

"The application won't be approved immediately and, if it is, the question will have to be turned over to the State Department for further action," a spokesman stated.

Room for 20 Passengers

The brand-new plane, built to carry at least 20 passengers, is being considered by Pan American Airways for possible use on commercial transatlantic flights. A special job built especially for Hughes, it may be tested first in a dash from New York to California.

A sister ship of the 56,000-pound streamlined airliner crashed two months ago near Seattle with two officials of the Dutch Airlines aboard. While cause of the accident has never been ascertained, investigators believe the pilot was placing stresses on the plane beyond its capacity.

With four companions, Hughes set a round-the-world record of 3 days and 19 hours in July, 1938. In 1937 he flew from Los Angeles to New York in 7 hours and 28 minutes. The year before he was awarded the Harmon trophy as the country's outstanding aviator.

The nephew of Rupert Hughes, novelist, Hughes first rode to fame as the 24-year-old producer of "Hell's Angels," hit movie of 1929. He operates a million-dollar tool industry in his native city, Houston, Tex.

Schwellenbach Urges Ban on Japan Trade

Senator Tells Hull Shipments of War Goods Can Be Halted

As exports of copper, steel scrap and fuel oil to Japan turned sharply upward for the first half of this year, Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, yesterday asked Secretary of State Hull to stop war material shipments to Japan.

A Commerce Department analysis showed Japanese purchases of United States raw cotton, crude petroleum, aircraft and automotive products declined in the six months ended in June, but shipment of scrap metal, refined copper, metal-working machinery, gasoline and fuel oil moved steadily upward.

Wartime Statute Cited

Schwellenbach, in a letter to Hull, suggested exports of war materials to Japan might be checked by invoking a wartime statute permitting the President to stop shipment of such materials in violation of law, or through voluntary agreements of shippers.

Schwellenbach, author of a bill to prohibit all trade with Japan, said the United States is "supplying 70 per cent of the more important materials used by the Japanese in the prosecution of the war against China." He said this violates the Nine-Power treaty, which guarantees the territorial integrity of China.

"The object of this letter," said the Washington Senator, "is to suggest to you that there is available to the executive department of the Government at any time the machinery by which the shipment of

Army Places $100,000,000 Plane Orders

Contracts Are Peacetime Record; Roosevelt Signs Defense Deficiency Bill

The Army yesterday stepped up its Air Corps expansion program by awarding plane contracts totalling more than $100,000,000, in the second move within 24 hours to keep the United States well up in the accelerating armaments race.

Largest award for planes in peacetime history, the contracts came on the heels of formation of a new War Resources Board to speed wartime industrial mobilization.

The action, designed to bring America's aerial might to 5,500 planes by July 1, 1941, was announced simultaneously with President Roosevelt's signing at Hyde Park of the third deficiency appropriations bill carrying an additional allotment of $44,500,000 in defense funds.

Martin Gets Largest Order

Although the number of planes remained secret, Acting Secretary of War Louis Johnson asserted the tentative contracts for various types of aircraft aggregated approximately $64,113,000, while $21,865,000 will be spent for plane engines. Other equipment contracts to be let under the tentative grants will bring the total above $100,000,000.

Largest single contract went to Glenn L. Martin Co., Baltimore, for two-engined bombers costing $15,815,000.

Others were:

Four-engined bombers, Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, Calif., $8,485,600; Boeing Aircraft Co., Seattle, Wash., $8,090,000, and additional options with the

D. C. Law Pupil Drowns in Pool As Soft Winds Ease Heat to 87

A Washington man was drowned in Chevy Chase Swimming Pool yesterday, while the record heat of the day before was driven to a "comfortable" 87 by gentle winds and cloudy skies.

Harold F. Burke, 22, 4326 Thirty-sixth street northwest, was found in 9 feet of water by lifeguards when his wife, with whom he was swimming, discovered he was missing. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, of Bethesda, Md., after artificial respiration by John Watts, a lifeguard, and pulmotor treatment by the Chevy Chase Rescue Squad proved futile.

BURKE

A second-year law student at Southeastern University, where he was president of his class, Burke was not employed this summer, members of his family said. His wife was Miss Jean Fallon, of Silver Spring. The couple, married two years, had a 7-month-old son.

The mercury dropped 24 degrees from the year's high of 96 to 72 degrees at 6 a. m. yesterday. The forecaster said today's temperatures would be about the same.

Storm warnings were ordered flown at 9:15 p. m. yesterday from Melbourne, Fla., to Key West, as a tropical disturbance moved toward the south Florida coast from 350 miles east southeast of Miami. The disturbance was bringing winds of 50 miles an hour.

Of the 12 Senators whom Woodrow Wilson labeled "a little group of willful men" because they filibustered against the arming of our merchant ships, only two are often mentioned or vividly remembered by anyone but the old-timers on Capitol Hill. They are Senator Norris, the only one still in the Senate, and Senator LaFollette, whose seat was inherited by his son.

By a strange coincidence, it was a group of 12 Senators which blocked Cordell Hull's neutrality legislation. Some observers here have been stressing the analogy. But even in the anger of the moment the analogy was not exact enough to wring from Hull or the President any public allusion to Woodrow Wilson's "willful 12." For one thing, no war was in progress and submarines weren't sinking our ships.

Trust Inquiry Extends Scope To 26 Fields

Oil Industry to Begin Analyzing Its Own Problems on Sept. 18

By Robert C. Albright

The President's Temporary National Economic Committee yesterday extended its monopoly inquiry to embrace 26 general fields, with hearings climaxing this winter in a round-table by prominent economists.

Pointing the far-reaching investigation toward final recommendations to Congress next March, the committee yesterday weeded out some topics, added others, and scheduled a heavy fall calendar of hearings beginning with industrial insurance testimony August 21.

Analysis by the oil industry of its own problems with particular reference to monopolistic practices in production, refining, transportation and marketing of oil, will begin September 18, Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney announced.

Schedule of Hearings

Hearings were scheduled on steel concentrations, October 15; investment banking, November 1; foreign cartels, November 15; status and enforcement of anti-trust laws, December 1, and industrial expansion plans, December 15. Dates remain to be fixed for hearings on consumer co-operatives and the impact of technology on employment.

With a vast economic field still awaiting committee survey and report, O'Mahoney said, it may become necessary to split the group into subcommittees this winter for hearings on some subjects, and complete others by departmental reports without hearings.

The group authorized its subcommittee to present the views of such prominent economists as Leonard P. Ayres, of the Cleveland Trust Co., and of such research organizations as the Brookings Institution, in unique "free for all" hearings to be held late in December. O'Mahoney said every economic viewpoint would be presented at these hearings, with the committee serving only as an organizing referee.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, one of the three Senate members, took minority exception to preliminary recommendations that persons who license their patents to others be prevented from restricting price, production or sale of articles manufactured under the patents.

King said that "patentees and students of patent law will defend vigorously the theory of restrictive licenses, and there has been no showing that restrictive licenses are of necessity undesirable, or that the public interest would be better served if restrictive licenses under patents were prohibited."

"Prices of patented articles are not easily kept at abnormally high levels, for it is a rare article for which substitutes are not easily available," King said. "As a matter of fact, in the glass industry, where the policy of restricted licenses has been followed, prices have been steadily reduced."

Subcommittee Named

The committee meanwhile appointed a special subcommittee, headed by Garland S. Ferguson, of the Federal Trade Commission, to hear testimony on industrial insurance, last phase of the committee's general insurance study, commencing August 21.

The oil industry will be permitted to tell its own story, from the viewpoint of large and small operators, under a new procedure approved for the September 18 hearings. Statements by the American Petroleum Institute and other groups already are under committee study. O'Mahoney said he was satisfied they would permit the committee "to present a well-rounded picture of the oil industry."

J. Howard Pew, of the Sun Oil Co., Dr. R. E. Wilson, of the Pan-American Petroleum & Transport Co., and Sidney A. Swensrud, of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, are expected to be among the witnesses.

Steel Investigation

The Justice Department is in charge of the committee's steel investigation, which will be laid before the committee October 15. O'Mahoney said it would be "a far-reaching and intensive study of the steel industry, as a whole, from the standpoint of concentration."

"We know, for example, that there are opportunities for development of steel in the West that are being held back by concentrations in the East. We will look into that, for one thing."

In addition to the economists' round table, it was decided to call for voluntary testimony by business leaders, and for data on problems of small business in obtaining capital, its failures and competition from chain stores. Tax correctives, restrictions on international trade, trade associations, State trade barriers and business sales methods were added as separate lines of inquiry.

A separate study of "labor costs and labor restraints" O'Mahoney said he thought would be left for a written report by the Labor and Justice departments, without hearings.

An outline of the committee's work already made public by O'Mahoney called for further studies of concentration of production, the status of competition, antitrust laws, co-operatives, Federal licensing, Government purchasing, Government regulation, governmental subsidies, investment outlets, the 1926 price level, price flexibility, primary producers and a review of trade practice conference agreements.

The Gallup Poll

Pennsylvania Law Forcing Relief Clients to Work Is Favored Throughout the Nation

By Dr. George Gallup.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 10.—Pennsylvania's new "work or starve" relief act, which requires persons receiving relief to work for what they get, is overwhelmingly approved by the voters of Pennsylvania and indorsed by public opinion throughout the rest of the country, as indicated in a survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

GEORGE GALLUP

The Pennsylvania law, under which a clerk may be ordered to dig ditches or a bookkeeper to repair a sewer, has stirred up so much controversy throughout the State that last week a small group of unemployed men picketed the Governor's mansion, demanding repeal of the act.

With the law having gone into effect August 1, the American Institute tested public sentiment in Pennsylvania and the rest of the Nation on the following issue:

"Pennsylvania has a law requiring all able-bodied people on relief (including WPA) to accept any job offered by a local government, no matter what kind of job it is. If they refuse to take the job, their relief is cut off. Do you favor this law?"

Vote in Pennsylvania
Yes	84%
No	16
Vote in Nation
Yes	81%
No	19

As passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature, with the blessing of Gov. Arthur James, the law requires the boards of public assistance in the 67 counties of the State to draw up lists on "employables" on relief. The services of these "employables" are then offered by the county boards to any governmental agencies, such as cities, counties, boroughs, townships and school boards, or charitable institutions, such as hospitals, that can use them. The "employable" must accept the work or go off relief.

The principle contained in this legislation is favored by voters, the survey finds, for two chief reasons. The first is that since taxpayers must foot the bill for relief they "should get something in return" in the shape of work. The second is that persons on relief should not expect to get something for nothing, and should not be "fussy" about the work they do. Those voters who, on the other hand, oppose the work requirements of the Pennsylvania law argue that it is "foolish" and "inefficient" to make people work at a job for which they are not suited.

The required-work principle for relief is indorsed by Democratic voters as well as Republicans throughout the Nation, the survey finds. Nearly eight out of every ten Democrats favor it, and nearly 9 of every ten Republicans.

While there is more sentiment for the Pennsylvania law among the upper income groups in the Nation than among the lower income groups, nevertheless even a majority of persons on WPA and home relief favor the idea.

The vote of reliefers, as distinguished from all others in the survey, follows:

	Favor.	Opposed.
Reliefers	64%	36%

Roosevelt Urges Liberal in 1940

"typically Republican administration," Mr. Roosevelt warned.

"It has been said that a great many voters today want us as a Nation to stop, look and listen," he said. "What they fail to understand is that nations cannot stand still because by the very act of standing still, the rest of the procession moving forward, inevitably leaves them in the rear."

Comment From Congress

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt's declaration to the Young Democrats that he would not actively support a conservative Democratic nominee in 1940 brought widely varying comment from party members in Congress.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who has advocated a third term for the President, said he believed Mr. Roosevelt was eminently right in "making it clear that there is room for only two parties in this country—conservative and liberal.

"The Republicans have preempted the conservative party, and there is only one place for the Democrats to go," Thomas said. "It will have to be Roosevelt or someone who will carry on liberal policies. We've made mistakes, but they have been on the liberal side. If we turn back we face defeat."

On the other hand, Senator King (Democrat), Utah, who has opposed many New Deal measures, said he believed the time has not yet come when "the Democratic Party will surrender to socialism."

"Mr. Roosevelt didn't hesitate to leave the party and vote for Theodore Roosevelt, so he would have a precedent for declining to take part in the election of a Democrat who will be nominated at the next convention," King said.

"The party founded by Thomas Jefferson was not a socialist party. It was a party founded on personal liberty and the dual form of government. There are millions of men and woman in this country who still believe in the principles of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland and Wilson and who will not follow any fantastic, socialistic schemes fabricated by some who claim to belong to the party, but who never were members of it, and some of whom were found in other political parties."

"Interesting" to Clark

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, himself mentioned as a possible Democratic nominee, commented: "Very interesting." Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, added to this, with "that's terrifically interesting." Both declined to enlarge on this comment.

Senator Andrews (Democrat), of Florida, couched his comment in terms of a plea for party harmony.

"What we need," he said, "is to bring the different elements of the Democratic Party together and forget our differences so that we can have assurance of winning in 1940.

"I am a party man and have aided the President in everything that I conscientiously could, but it is impossible to agree with any one man on everything. Any mistakes that the President might have made, however, have been on the side of humanity."

Politics Opened To 300,000

tion forbids anyone in an administrative position—whether departmental or Congressional—to try to influence an election for a Federal office.

The Justice Department has not decided what Congressional positions would be regarded as administrative. Murphy pointed out that violations of section 2 were punishable by imprisonment up to one year, a fine of $1,000, or both. Violations of section 9 (a), which apply only to departmental employes, are punishable, he said, merely by removal from office.

Amendment Suggested

Provisions of the Hatch law relating to the improper use of relief appropriations for political purposes, intimidation of voters, and the like, "apply to all persons, including employes of State and local governments and private individuals."

Mr. Roosevelt, in his message, suggested an amendment to the act permitting Government employes to hold elective office in nearby Maryland and Virginia communities. For many years, he explained, there has been an exception to the civil service political ban giving this privilege to civil service employes.

Since the Hatch bill does not carry this exception, a question has been raised as to whether the new law abridges the civil service rules to this extent, thus prohibiting both civil service and non-civil service employes from holding office.

This question is one of many confronting the Justice Department civil liberties unit, which has been entrusted with the administration of the act. Department officials are not certain that an amendment is necessary, and the object of the coming conference with Civil Service Commission representatives is to try to determine the answer.

Wall Street Rules G. O. P., Says Pepper

Floridan Designates Bricker and Dewey As 1940 Candidates

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 10.—Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, keynoting the Young Democrats' national convention tonight, advocated a "third term for Roosevelt's ideas" and charged "the kingmakers of Wall Street want to name the next President as they have often in the past."

The Florida Senator, a stanch New Dealer, predicted Wall Street's choice "is Bricker, of Ohio, for President, and Dewey, of New York (I believe) for Vice President," both Republicans.

Pitt Tyson Maner, of Montgomery, Ala., retiring president of the Young Democrats opened the three-day meeting after much preliminary bickering among factions over the organization presidency and following an interview in which Pepper charged that "Republicans and turncoat Democrats have deliberately sent their spies" here to "disrupt" the convention.

O'Connor Is There

Former Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, Roosevelt "purge" victim last year, countered by saying the New Deal had representatives here of Thomas G. Corcoran, young Administration lawyer, to see that everything "goes well for Roosevelt."

Homer Mat Adams, 28-year-old Illinois State official, appeared to have the edge in the race for president, to be named Saturday. Pat Beacom, Huntington, W. Va., another candidate, withdrew during the day in the interest of "harmony."

Pepper asserted Owen D. Young, board chairman of General Electric, "had let the cat out of the bag in a speech in Boston when he said 'I know who the next President is going to be, but I won't tell.'"

Pepper said Wall Street had picked Gov. Bricker "because he talks liberal and acts like Hoover."

"They picked Dewey," he added, "because he was a glamour boy and he will take orders." He continued:

"Both have the unique advantage of having no fixed political convictions, so that they can be liberal or conservative, according to the character of their opponents. They are using Taft, Republican Senator from Ohio, as a stalking horse for Bricker.

Same Tale, Says Pepper

The Floridan said it was "tragic history" how Wall Street had handpicked Presidents from both parties in the past.

"Every sign in the political sky tells the same ominous tale," he asserted. "There is already formed the greatest combination of money and power this Nation has ever seen, with but a single purpose—to drive out of power at any cost, an Administration which has dared to try to help the people of America."

After asserting the Democratic Party came into being "to combat those forces who sought more than their share of the blessings of Government and demanded of mankind more than they gave," Pepper went on:

"It is the just verdict of this Nation that when their Government, in the hands of the Republican Party, under the dictatorship of the Wall Street oligarchy, has not lent its assistance to the plundering of the people, it has stood by as helpless as the impotent man at the springs of Bethesda.'

"These robber barons, like their counterparts of feudal England, had even outgrown their Government."

Assistant Secretary of War Louois Johnson told the Young Democrats the Administration was building a big Navy and Army not to make war, "but to keep us out of war.'

"I want to assure you that neither the President nor any of the members of his Cabinet, nor any of the men in our armed services, nor any one responsible for the welfare and the happiness of his country, has any desire to use our armed forces for any purpose of aggression," he said in a prepared address.

Deficiency Bill Is Signed by President; Veterans' Bonus Extension Is Vetoed

By International News Service.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 10.—A stroke of President Roosevelt's pen carried the final deficiency bill into law today, with its $185,176,066 appropriation for agricultural aid, social security grants to States, additional armament and the training of civilian pilots.

Mr. Roosevelt vetoed a bill, however, which would have extended for another five years from January 2, 1940, the time in which World War veterans may apply for adjusted compensation.

In all, the Executive signed 27 bills today and vetoed 5, bringing down to 76 the number still on his desk. He took time off from this labor to entertain his birthday ball committee at lunch and hear that the public had contributed a record-breaking $1,329,100.36 to the fight against infantile paralysis. Of this sum, $707,192.35 remained in the communities where raised for local work, and a check for $621,908.01 was turned over to Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis Research.

$119,000,000 for Agriculture

The deficiency act gives $119,000,000 to the Commodity Credit Corporation. According to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace it was necessary if farm prices were to be kept from dropping to 1932 levels.

States get $12,500,000 in social security grants.

In furtherance of the national defense program, $10,000,000 is allotted for strategic war materials; $6,000,000 will be spent on arms and ammunition; $2,500,000 will enable modernization; $2,070,000 additional goes to the naval public works program, and $4,000,000 will be spent on training civilian pilots.

In connection with his veto of the veterans' bill, Mr. Roosevelt made known his annoyance at the practice of Congress in establishing deadlines for filing claims and then continuously extending them. He noted that the veterans had been given time to file for their adjusted compensation in various acts from 1928 down to January 2, 1940, and he said further extension was unjustified.

Last week the President vetoed a similar bill which would have extended for an additional four years the legal lifespan of interlocking directorates. Congress had extended the time limit four years once before.

He "gladly" signed today a measure which terminates six months from today the right of civilian employes of the Government to make claims for additional compesation between 1917 and 1924.

Another bill vetoed would have applied the 2-cent letter rate within the entire county of Queens, New York. Mr. Roosevelt said such action would establish a dangerous precedent for other communities.

Sea Safety Bill Signed

A bill approved prohibits the use of the mails for the solicitation of the procurement of divorces in foreign countries.

Two others are designed to promote greater safety in sea travel by requiring that ships carrying 50 or more passengers must be equipped with fire pumps and automatic sprinkler systems, while all vessels are required to carry life-saving apparatus.

A third veto rejected the compensation of the San Francisco Scenic Boulevard Co. in part for the value of a road constructed on Government property which the company was unable to complete.

The other two rejected were private relief bills.

Approval was given an act to provide for the observance and celebration of the 150th anniversary of Gallipolis, Ohio.

The Executive also approved extension of the life of the joint committee investigating the adequacy and use of phosphate resources of the United States.

Other measures were largely private relief bills.

At the Hyde Park luncheon for the birthday ball committee it was developed that this year the "march of dimes" had totaled $217,802.28, as against $81,007.65 last year.

Chairman Keith Morgan reported that $1,379,100 total collection from all sources bettered 1938's previous high mark of $1,010,000.

Mr. Roosevelt thanked his committee, which included Vice Chairman Joseph M. Schenck, of Los Angeles; District of Columbia Commissioner George E. Allen; S. Clay Williams, of Winson-Salem, N. C., and Harvey C. Couch, of Pine Bluff, Ark.

Maj. L. E. Thompson, representing the Will Rogers National Theater Campaign for the Will Rogers Memorial, also was present to turn over a check for $100,000 for the infantile paralysis fight. The sum will be split 50-50 between the National Foundation and approximately 25 cities.

Barrett Lists 66 Play Areas Still Closed

Insufficient Use and Proximity to Other Grounds Are Reasons

Lewis R. Barrett, director of the District Recreation Department, yesterday made public a list of 66 closed school playgrounds, together with the reasons for their not being opened. Forty-six are for white children, 20 for colored.

At present more than 100 other school playgrounds are in use, including all of those in the central congested area of the Capital.

Barrett said the grounds at Central and Wilson High schools and Deal and Paul Junior High schools were closed, due to lack of demand for their summer use. Proximity to other grounds was given as the reason for closing the Anacostia High School and Dennison Vocation School play areas.

Among the elementary schools, proximity to other grounds was the explanation for keeping the following closed: Adams, Amidon, Blair, Blow, E. V. Brown, Bryant, Bunker Hill, Dent, Eckington, Edmonds, Force, Health, Hilton, Jacksoon, Ketcham, Kay, Langdon, Madison, Peabody, Rossell, Takoma, Taylor, Tyler, Webb, West and Whittier.

Insufficient Clientele

Insufficient clientele, said Barrett, resulted in the decision against opening Gage, Keene, Mann, Oyster, Petworth, Van Ness and Webster. Greenleaf is closed because the play space is too small, Hardy because of citizens' objections to its being opened, Kingsman because of construction and Weightman because the area is being used for nursery school purposes.

The colored playgrounds at Miner Teachers College, Armstrong and Cardozo High schools, Terrell Junior High, Washington Vocational and Toner and Wilson Elementary schools, are closed because they are not large enough to justify summer operations, said Barrett.

"Insufficient clientele" was the reason advanced for the suspension at Ambush, Magruder, Reno, Sumner and Wormley Elementary schools.

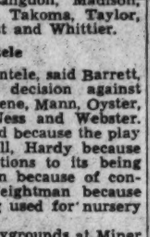
Closed by Construction

Construction work forced the closing of John F. Cook and Smothers, while proximity to other playgrounds brought about the closing of Birney, Mott and Smallwood.

Barrett reported yesterday that administrative headquarters of the District Recreation Department, now scattered in the Interior, District and Franklin School buildings, will be housed in the old Force School building in the 1700 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest "in about a week or so."

District Woman 'Adopts' Spanish Refugee Child

Mrs. Ruth S. Brown, of 4424 Reservoir road northwest, has "adopted" a 12-year-old Spanish refugee boy, Isaac Velada Grona, through the Foster Parents' Plan for Spanish Children, it was announced yesterday by Executive Secretary Eric G. Muggeridge.



ISAAC

Adoption entails a promise to support a child for one year at one of the seven children's colonies in and around Biarritz, France. More than 800 Americans, including Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Efram Zimbalist, Helen Hayes, Tallulah Bankhead and Katherine Lewis, have "adopted" children through the plan. There are more than 100,000 Spanish children in French concentration camps awaiting sponsors, it was stated.

Florida in 1936 and with whom, he said he lived until April of this year.

She told him, Cochran confessed, that she "did not need" him any more and told him to "go ahead and be a criminal if you want to."

"I decided to do it and picked out her home town to do it in," Cochran said in explaining that the woman who scorned him was a native of Miami.

Cochran's written confession added details to the stories he told after his capture at nearby Boca Raton, where Miss Bolton escaped when he allowed her to telephone home.

His murder motive remained somewhat of a puzzle, even after questioning by Lawrence, County Solicitor W. E. Roebuck, W. C. Fuller, of the Department of Justice, and Chief Deputy Sheriff J. E. Hardwick, jr.

Cochran said he attacked both girls Monday night, although Miss Bolton's relatives in Miami denied Jean had been attacked. Fearing a search he tried to move the car to hide it and it got stuck in the sand.

"Jean was sitting very quietly, not doing anything at all," said Cochran, "so I thought I could leave her in the car and I took Frances Ruth with me. We walked all around, all over the place, seeing what was around there. I had been drinking the rest of the night and thinking about things and Frances Ruth said something to me and I just lost my head," Cochran said.

Cochran said he did not attack Miss Dunn just before the slaying.

"Did you have the butcher knife with you at the time you killed her?" he was asked.

"No, that was on the ground."

"Do you remember what she said to you?"

"Yes, sir." Cochran replied. He said she told him "You wouldn't do this" to the actress he had blamed for his troubles.

"That's the girl I was with for the last 2½ years," Cochrane said mournfully. "That's the reason for my breaking up, also the reason for this."

"You hit her (Frances) with the hammer how many times?" he was asked.

"Honestly, I don't know."

"When did you cut her with a knife?"

"It all happened then and there."

"Did you shoot her then?"

"No, sir."

"Didn't you tell us this morning you did?"

"I guess I was a little scared this morning and I would have said yes to anything."

The three spent Monday night near Boca Raton. Cochran's latest confession did not relate details of his attacks on the girls. He told officers earlier he separated the girls shortly after he stopped the car on the side road, threatened them with a gun to "be good" and told them he was not the theatrical producer he claimed to be.

According to police, Cochran led the two girls from the automobile, binding each to trees about 400 feet apart and then attacked Miss Dunn.

Detectives said that Tuesday morning, after Miss Dunn again had been attacked, Cochran killed her with a butcher knife, inflicting seven stab wounds in the stomach, throat and head. He then covered her body with a raincoat and returned to Jean, his confession said.

A coroner's jury, assembled swiftly after Miss Bolton's telephone call and Cochran's capture, found Cochran had slain Miss Dunn. State's Attorney Phil O'Connell said he would ask a special grand jury to consider charges of kidnaping, criminal assault and murder.

Miss Bolton, near a nervous collapse, appeared at the Boca Raton fire station this morning and asked to use the telephone.

Cochran loitered nervously outside.

An aunt in Miami answered the telephone and hysterically Jean asked her to send an automobile.

"Come alone or I may be killed," she said. "Do not have any cars following you."

The message was at the direction of Cochran, who had hoped that he could commandeer the automobile and escape. He coached the girl for nearly 24 hours in the message she gave, threatening her with death.

A fireman on duty at the fire house, Kline Platt, possibly saved Miss Bolton from death, police said. Platt recognized her and refused to permit her to rejoin Cochran.

When dectectives arrived, they found the 5-foot blonde blues singer trembling and hardly able to stand. She was so overcome with fear of Cochran that, for several minutes, she was unable to give a clear account of what had happened.

Detectives were starting back to Miami from Boca Raton with Miss Bolton in their automobile when she spied Cochran walking along the street and pointed him out to officers.

Clubs Back Mrs. Biddle For Relief Post

Women's Delegation To Call on Hazen At Office Today

A delegation representing Washington club women and headed by Mrs. Charles P. Keyser will appear in Commissioner Hazen's office at 12:30 p. m. today to urge appointment of Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle to the $4600-post of assistant relief director for the District. Mrs. Biddle is a director from the District to the general Federation of Womens' Clubs.

Commenting on the delegation's proposed visit, Mrs. Keyser said last night the group represented no specific organization, but was representative of Washington club women in general.

The delegation's actions follows on the heels of Mrs. Biddle's recent request to officials to give a woman a job "big enough to make a loise." She announced at that time that she was a candidate for the job left vacant by May O. Hankins last April.

The Biard of Welfare will handle the filling of vacancies for the position of assistant relief director and the position of superintendent of Lorton. Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Welfare Board, said it was unlikely that any action to fill the vacancies would be taken before August 28.

Imported Silver Price Is Above Treasury Level

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—The domestic price for imported silver today stepped above the United State's Treasury's price for foreign metal for the first time since May, 1937.

Jumping three-eighths of a cent an ounce to 35⅛ cents, the domestic import price topped by one-eighth of a cent the Treasury's quotation of 35 cents.

Bullion dealers explained that buyers were willing to pay the higher price for quick delivery because recent exports of the white metalJ—estimated by some as high as 3,000,000 ounces—had left the local market light of metal.

Takoma Legion Picks C. E. Thomas

Sergt. C. Earl Thomas, chiaf of the town police force, last night was elected commander of Takoma Park Post No. 28, American Legion, at a meeting in the firehouse. Thomas, recently appointed head of the force after being refused reappointment as a policeman, succeeds George B. Kissinger.

Other new officers are Grant G. Bergstresser, vice commander; Jack Forst, second vice commander; Homer Page Porter, adjutant; James F. Hatcher, chaplain; William B. Mauger, historian; Daniel Twiddy, sergeant-at-arms; Riley Stevens, assistant sergeant-at-arms.

The Maharana Saheb of Dharampur and Princess Baiji, his 12-year-old daughter, in native dress

The ruler of an ancient Indian state, who lives in an air-conditioned palace, plays a clari-saxaphone and promotes free education and free medical aid for his people, came to Washington yesterday to see what the National Capital has to offer in the way of civilization.

His Highness, the Maharana Saheb of Dharampur, and his 12-year-old daughter, Princess Rajendrakunvar Baiji Saheb, paused between sightseeing jaunts for an encounter with the press. Although they kept their conversation at a minimum. Dr. K. B. Pispati, personal physician to His Highness, was ready enough to talk about the royal prowess in "bagging" 300 tigers, popularizing Indian music and improving his country.

The party's two-month tour to North America was taken partly to give a change of surroundings to His Highness, sorrowing because of the death of his wife and a daughter within a year.

He is interestedly observing the American way of doing things, but his physician would not hazard a guess as to what ideas might be transplanted to his Indian state, after the journey is over.

With a somber expression, His Highness faced a battery of cameras. Against his white suit, a tattooed lotusflower stood out on his hand. Beside him the little princess smiled out from a brilliant red and green sari draped around her. The red mark on her forehead, made with powder, was a "lucky sign," Dr. Pispati explained.

"In the 18 years that His Highness has been ruling, he has done much to further free education and free medical aid," Dr. Pispati declared.

Along with this the 55-year-old ruler has managed to become a crack shot and an authority on Indian music with books to his credit.

His state, about 800 square miles, reaches within a short distance of Bombay, the doctor explained. But while quoting statistics, Dr. Pispati declined to perform the mental arithmetic necessary to calculate His Highness' wealth or the number of his autos.

Soon after the party arrived in Washington yesterday and took a wing at the Shoreham Hotel, they set out to see the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other Government buildings.

Captain Harold A. White, explorer, curator and world traveller, relates his fascinating experiences in this new White Horse series. Follow it week by week.

Saved by a Wall of Dead Elephants

A thundering herd of enraged elephants charges down on a small band of hunters. Nowhere to run ...no time to turn. The only retreat is a quicksand swamp with promise of certain death. A rifle cracks out and one beast drops in his tracks. Other hunters find their marks...two...three...five...nine beasts fall. And as they drop these giant elephants form a wall, barricading the rest of the herd... saving the lives of the hunters. "Those were the three most exciting minutes in my life," says Captain White, "I will never forget them!"

And you will never forget the equally exciting, but much more pleasant thrill of every smooth sip of White Horse. Every corner of the globe is familiar with the sign of the White Horse. So mix the silver bubbles of soda with the golden scotch in your glass and enjoy a long cool drink of White Horse. In your icy glass is proof of the superiority of White Horse and the reason for its tremendous popularity. NLRB Eases Order Against Ford Factory

However, Ruling of Guilt in Violations Is Reaffirmed

By the United Press.

The National Labor Relations Board last night reaffirmed its ruling that the Ford Motor Co. was guilty of violating the Wagner act at its vast River Rouge plant in Dearborn, Mich., but modified its original order against the firm in several material respects.

The Ford company was ordered to reinstate 24 employes with back pay, five less reinstatements than were contained in the original decision of December 22, 1937, which the board vacated to correct possible procedure deficiencies.

The board dismissed its own charge that the firm had dominated or interfered with the formation or administration, or contributed support to, the unaffiliated Ford Brotherhood of America, Inc. In its previous decision, the NLRB had found the company guilty on this count.

Propaganda Assailed

The new decision retained the disputed section requiring the firm to "cease and desist from . . . interfering with, restraining or coercing its employes in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the act by circulating, distributing or otherwise disseminating among its employes statements or propaganda which disparages or criticizes labor organizations or which advises its employes not to join such organization."

Ford attorneys had contended that such an order was an unconstitutional abridgement of the freedom of speech and freedom of press, guaranteed by the first amendment to the United States Constitution.

The board referred to the famous "Fordisms," quotations from Henry Ford, and to the musings of "Smokestack Joe," mythical character in the "Ford Almanac," both of which contained anti-union statements.

Declared to be Coercion

The company contended these were no more than "an expression of opinion upon the part of the employer addressed to his employes," but the board said distribution of such literature "interfered with, restrained and coerced" Ford employes in the exercise of their rights of self-organization.

"We do not believe that the foregoing finding unconstitutionally abridges the respondent's (Ford's) freedom of speech and of the press," the NLRB said. "Freedom of speech is a qualified, not an absolute right.

"The act requires the employer to refrain from acts that interfere with, restrain or coerce employes in the exercise of their rights to self-organization and collective bargaining. The guarantee of such rights to the employes would indeed be wholly ineffective if the employer, under the guise of exercising his constitutional right of free speech, were free to coerce them into refraining from exercising the rights vouchsafed them in the act."

The new decision brought the vigorous and protracted dispute between Ford and the NLRB nearer a final decision. The board long has indicated it itended to have its major Supreme Court test in the Ford battle hinge on the Dearborn case.

The Dearborn case already has been to the Supreme Court once on a technicality, and the Ford company was defeated in its attempt to prevent the Sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals from remanding the case to the board for correction of possible procedural errors.

The present case arose directly from the famed "battle of the overpass" at the River Rouge plant May 26, 1937, in which several union leaders were beaten allegedly by Ford service department employes.

Threats Forbidden

Under the new decision, the company is directed to cease and desist from:

Discouraging membership in the United Automobile Workers by discharging or refusing to reinstate any employes, or discriminating in regard to their hire or tenure, because of membership or activity in the U. A. W.

Threatening, assaulting, beating, or in any other manner interfering with, restraining, or intimidating, directly or indirectly, members of the U. A. W. or other unions distributing or otherwise disseminating union literature in the vicinity of its River Rouge plant.

Interfering with, restraining or coercing employes in their right of self-organization by distributing anti-union lierature.

Bids Opened on Ridge Road Low-Cost Housing Project

5 Builders Bid On Low-Rent Project Here

Alley Dwelling Unit Will Study Estimates For Houses in S. E.

Five contractors yesterday submitted bids for construction of the District Alley Dwelling Authority's $1,000,000 Ridge Road housing project. The amounts were not divulged because it will take several days' study to determine which is the most favorable, due to the number of alternate bids on various phases of the work.

Companies which submitted estimates were Skinker & Garrett, Walter B. Avery and Victor R. Beauchamp, all of Washington; M. Shapiro & Sons, New York City, and John McShain Co., Baltimore.

The site for the new low-rent community is on both sides of Ridge road southeast, above Anacostia road. The program provides for construction of 326 dwellings, divided among one-family, two-story houses in groups, two-family flats and three-story apartment buildings.

Somewhat more than $1,000,000 is available for construction under a loan by the U. S. Housing Authority. That agency will review the bids offered yesterday and act upon the ADA's recommendations.

Fingerprint Clews Checked to Trap Annapolis Bandit

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents yesterday turned to fingerprints on the shelf of the teller's window in an attempt to identify the youthful robber who took $2,600 from the Annapolis Banking and Trust Co. Wednesday under threat of blowing up the bank.

Earlier, efforts to identify a suspect in Washington failed. W. Emerson Wiley, the teller who surrendered the funds to the bandit, came to Washington to view a suspect who came under suspicion through the spending of $110 in $10 bills. This man said to have answered the general description of the man sought. Wiley, however, said he was not the man.

Chief William Curry of Annapolis, investigated a report from a woman that she had seen the robber enter a taxicab waiting on Maryland avenue a short distance from the bank. Learning the name of the cab company, the police started a check-up among the drivers, apparently without result.

Erection of Replica Of Columbian Fair Fountain Approved

Authority for erection in the Capital of a marble replica of the famous Columbian fountain that stood at the world's Columbia exposition in Chicago in 1893 was granted in a bill signed yesterday by President Roosevelt.

The act allows sponsors of the movement two years in which to select a site suitable to the Commission of Fine Arts and stipulates that the project be completed without cost to the Government.

The House Library Committee had described the fountain as "the most beautiful fountain of modern times."

4,442 Arrested By Park Police

United States Park Police made 4,442 arrests during the fiscal year ended last June 30, Acting Superintendent Frank T. Gartside of National Capital Parks announced yesterday.

Of this number, 162 were made on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, of which 70 were for speeding and 35 for reckless driving.

Most common District offense was violation of traffic regulations, accounting for 2,575 of the arrest cases. Next in order came drunkenness, 868; violation of park regulations, 381; speeding, 141, and disorderly conduct, 128.

Police Safari In Back Yard Nets a 'Possum

Two Washington policemen, without pith helmets, yesterday fared forth on a safari which netted one wild animal, a woman reassured, and a fine, fat dinner.

It began when the dispatcher at police headquarters picked up his telephone and heard a woman's excited voice: "There's a wild and ferocious animal in my grape arbor. He's just sitting up there eating my grapes and grinning at me and showing his teeth." Privates Jack Groves and Edward Hall, of Tenth Precinct, sped to 2721 Eleventh street northwest, assigned by radio to the chase.

There they found Emma Clark keeping clear of the grape arbor in her back yard. And, approaching the arbor, they found peering from among its leaves a fat 'possum.

They gave it to Earl Wright, of 113 H street southeast, who toted it off by the tail to make "a pow'ful good dinner tonight."

21 Senators Held Balance Of Power

39 Voted Consistently For, 36 Against Administration Bills

By Richard L. Turner.
Associated Press Staff Writer

An analysis of last session's Senate voting disclosed yesterday that 21 Senators held the balance of power in that chamber, with the remainder of the membership almost equally divided between consistent administration support and opposition.

On a basis of six votes, involving essential New Deal issues, 39 Senators, all Democrats but one, voted almost uniformly to uphold the position of President Roosevelt. Thirty-six members, 14 of them Democrats, voted as consistently against the Chief Executive. The chamber's decisions were dominated by 21 who voted first one way and then the other.

Based on Six Issues

The analysis was based on the voting on six issues. These ballots were: On the size of the session's first appropriation for relief; the Wheeler amendment to the reorganization act aimed at reducing the President's power under that measure; the Florida ship canal; the adoption of the conference report on the monetary bill; the Byrd amendment knocking $500,000,000 for public roads from the Administration lending bill, and the Townsend proposal to forbid future purchases of foreign silver.

Twenty-nine Senators, all Democrats except Norris (Independent), throughout. Ten Democrats, including throughout. Ten Democrats, including a number of avowed New Deal supporters, cast a single vote against the Administration. Most of these defections were easily explained on sectional or other grounds.

In the other camp, 11 Democrats and 20 Republicans voted in all cases against the Administration. In addition, three Democrats, one Republican and one Farmer-Laborite departed from an otherwise unbroken anti-Administration position in a single instance. The five were mostly outspoken anti-New Dealers.

This left in the middle the group of 21, who, by casting votes sometimes for and sometimes against the Administration, obviously were in a position heavily influencing the outcome. The group was made up of 17 Democrats, two Republicans —Borah (Idaho) and Frazier (North Dakota)—and one Farmer-Laborite, Lundeen (Minnesota).

Bone (Washington), Brown (Michigan), Byrnes (South Carolina), Donahey (Ohio), Herring (Iowa), Miller (Arkansas), all Democrats, and La Follette (Wisconsin), cast two anti-Administration votes. Ashurst (Arizona), Gillette (Iowa), Harrison (Mississippi), Johnson (Colorado), Maloney (Connecticut), Radcliffe (Maryland), Wheeler (Montana) and Walsh (Massachusetts), all Democrats, and Borah and Lundeen, voted three times in opposition; four anti-Administration ballots were cast by Lucas (Illinois), McCarran (Nevada) and Russell (Georgia), Democrats, and Frazier.

Rest of G. O. P. Solid

Other Republican members stood almost solidly together in their opposition to New Deal measures. Twenty of the 23 members of that party voted against the Administration on all six occasions, and one, Nye, of North Dakota, departed but once.

In all instances, they were joined by 11 Democrats—Adams, of Colorado; Bailey, of North Carolina; Bulow, of South Dakota; Burke, of Nebraska; Byrd, of Virginia; Gerry, of Rhode Island; Glass, of Virginia; Holt, of West Virginia; King, of Utah; Tydings, of Maryland, and Van Nuys, of Indiana. Clark, of Missouri; George, of Georgia, and Smith, of South Carolina, Democrats, each voted once the way Mr. Roosevelt would have preferred.

The 29 who supported the President without exception were Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, and 28 Democrats—Andrews, of Florida; Barkley, of Kentucky; Bilbo, of Mississippi; Caraway, of Arkansas; Chavez, of New Mexico; Downey, of California; Ellender, of Louisiana Green, of Rhode Island; Hayden, of Arizona; Hill, of Alabama; Hughes, of Delaware; Lee, of Oklahoma; Logan, of Kentucky Mead, of New York; Minton, of Indiana; Murray, of Montana; Neely, of West Virginia; Overton, of Louisiana; Pittman, of Nevada; Pepper, of Florida; Schwartz, of Wyoming; Schwellenbach, of Washington; Sheppard, of Texas; Smathers, of New Jersey; Stewart, of Tennessee; Thomas, of Oklahoma; Thomas, of Utah, and Wagner, of New York.

Ten Democrats who left the fold a single time were Bankhead, of Alabama; Clark, of Idaho; Connally, of Texas; Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Hatch, of New Mexico; McKellar, of Tennessee; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Reynolds, of North Carolina; Slattery, of Illinois, and Truman, of Missouri.

Democrats To Rule Senate Despite '40 Vote

Anticipated Gains By G. O. P. Won't Bring Control

By the Associated Press

Democrats will have more than three times as many Senate seats at stake in next year's elections as Republicans.

Thirty-three places will be filled. Of these, 24 are held by Democrats, 7 by Republicans, 1 by Farmer-Laborite, and one by a Progressive.

As an offsetting factor, however, the Democrats already are counting as safe the elections in a half dozen States—Florida, Arizona, Mississippi, Virginia, Texas and Tennessee.

Can't Win Majority

If the Republicans kept every place they now have and won all the elections except those in traditionally Democratic States, they still would add only 20 seats to their present total of 23. That would leave the Democrats and minor parties with a total of 53, or a majority of the 96 Senators.

Thus, if a Republican President were elected next year, he could not hope to have party control of the Senate.

Although 32 Senate terms run out every two years, there will be an extra election in 1940, because Illinois will choose a successor to the late J. Hamliton Lewis. Senator Slattery (Democrat), Illinois, is holding Lewis' seat by appointment.

Minton Doubts Victory

Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, the majority whip, said yesterday there appeared to be little chance for Democrats to win any of the present Republican seats next year, except in California, where the veteran Senator Hiram Johnson will be up for re-election.

On the other hand, Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, assistant minority leader, has contended Republicans have a good chance to pick up at least a half-dozen seats now held by Democrats.

Psychologists to Meet

The American Association for Applied Psychology will hold its third annual professional conference and business meeting here December 1 to 3, it was decided yesterday. An attendance of 250 is expected. Dr. Horace B. English, of Ohio State University, is executive secretary in charge of arrangements. The conference will be held at the Wardman Park Hotel.

May Evict Parking Lot Operator

The District Commissioners today were free to evict Samuel Lovenbein, of 1133 Thirteenth street northwest, from the parking lot on the site of the new Municipal Center and rent the land to the highest bidder.

Justice Goldsborough yesterday refused to protect Lovenbein against eviction, but gave him five days to file an amended petition setting up new claims to the property.

The justice asked at the hearing whether Lovenbein claimed the District had no right to rent to the highest bidder. Lovenbein's lawyers said he did, because the high bid might be above the "fair rental."

"Then isn't your client in illegal possession of the premises?" Goldsborough asked. He then dismissed the plea for an injunction, saying, "the Commissioners have a right to rent by competitive bidding."

Gen. Beck to Retire As Staff Assistant

Maj. Gen. Robert McC. Beck, assistant chief of staff, Operations and Training Division, War Department, now on leave of absence, will retire October 31 after 38 years active service, it was announced yesterday.

Gen. Beck, who retires on his own application, has been stationed here since March, 1938. A native of Westminster, Md., he was graduated from West Point in the class of 1901.

Gen. Beck saw action in Mexico and the Philippines and in World War offensives.

Son Is Cheaper To Educate

It's much cheaper to send a son to college than a daughter, according to a study at the University of Minnesota. Several hundred students kept accounts last year for the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company.

The women's expenditures averaged $59.70, and the men $56.54 per month. But with earnings deducted, the average monthly cost for the three out of four men who "worked their way," was only $24.88, while the two out of five girls who earned part of their expenses paid out an additional $35.44.

Italy May Urge Peaceful End To Danzig Row

Ciano Slated to Review Free City Problem With von Ribbentrop

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 10.—Foreign circles looked tonight to Italy to urge upon Germany a peaceful settlement of her claims to the Free City of Danzig, former German territory.

Diplomats expected that Foreign Minister Count Ciano would advise against any action concerning Danzig that might lead to war when he meets German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop in conference tomorrow in Salzburg.

It was reported in foreign circles that Germany promised she would risk no war over Danzig when the Italian-German military alliance was signed last May, and there was considerable speculation whether Von Ribbentrop would be urged now by Count Ciano to adhere to that engagement.

Danzig Question Review Seen

Cout Ciano left Rome tonight for the talks as Fascists expressed a belief the Danzig question was approaching a crucial stage.

The two foreign ministers were expected to review the Danzig question thoroughly, as well as the possibility of Japan's joining the Italian-German military alliance and the relationship of Hungary, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia to the Rome-Berlin axis.

Count Ciano will arrive tomorrow afternoon in Salzburg. The conversations will take place in Fuschl Castle.

The Italian press, along with that of Germany, kept Danzig in the headlines, with La Tribuna declaring there was "mad language in Warsaw" and Il Lavoro Fascista asserting the Germans had given "fresh warning to the nervous debility of Warsaw."

Yugoslavia a Question Mark

Yugoslavia was believed in diplomatic circles to be causing the axis powers some concern because of her determination to preserve strict neutrality.

Some observers suggested Rome and Berlin might try to line up Bulgaria more closely with the axis as a means of bringing additional pressure on Yugoslavia.

(Belgrade dispatches said Yugoslav Premier Dragisha Cvetkovich, on a trip to Italy which began Thursday, would present the Yugoslav position of neutrality to Count Ciano and possibly would see Premier Mussolini.

Issue Held Unchanged

Warsaw, Aug. 10 (AP).—The reaction here tonight to Albert Forster's Danzig speech was that its general nature indicated Fuehrer Hitler has not yet decided on any definite move regarding the Free City.

Responsible quarters said the speech in no way changed the fundamental questions at issue, despite its "harsh tone and decidedly anti-Polish character."

Two points noted in Warsaw were the absence of any definite statement in the way of possible action and the lack of any reference to a conciliatory attitude.

Before the speech was made the Polish press had attacked Germany in terms of unprecedented violence, apparently free from official restraint. Political sources emphasized, however, that it did not represent the official attitude.

"After five months of war of nerves, Germany now relaizes she has lost this war," said the pro-government Kurjer Czerwony.

Capital Defenders Driven Back

Parsons today and afterwards told newsmen it was the purpose of Congress to furnish the Army with the best of fighting equipment.

Good Equipment Pledged

"Congress will not permit the Army ever to go into war," Mr. May said, "with sticks and stones as it has in the past. We will give them the best weapons American industry can devise. We do not have a large army, but it is the best trained in the world. Following the policy laid down by Washington, we want a small standing army, highly trained, and a National Guard of high efficiency."

The Military Committee chairman said he thought it a "waste of money" to maintain young men in CCC camps without giving them "reasonable hours of military training."

Notables to Pay Visit

District Commissioners Hazen and McCoach, and the Governors of Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, accompanied by various State officials, are to arrive tomorrow night. They will be guests of Maj. Gen. Edward Martin, Twenty-eighth Division commander, at dinner and, with Lieut. Gen. Drum and Gen. Parsons, will review the Third Corps Saturday morning.

Hazen and McCoach will observe the 121st Engineers, District National Guard, build a 120-foot pontoon bridge tomorrow night, Col. John W. Oehmann announced today.

Orders received late today direct the unit to lay a bridge across Cocoquan Creek under cover of darkness. The annual dinner of the regiment's officers has been cancelled. They will go on night maneuvers with the Engineers instead.

Experts to View Work

Col. Oehmann said tomorrow night's mission requires the bridge be laid without lights and with a minimum of noise. It is assumed enemy patrols are nearby. In Commissioner McCoach, the guardsmen will have an expert viewing their work. He is a Lieutenant Colonel of regular Army Engineers.

Both Hazen and McCoach are expected to spend the night at the 121st Engineers' camp in Col. Oehmann's trailer.

The review of Twenty-eighth Division will take place at 8:30 Saturday followed by that of the Twenty-ninth at 9:30. Both will be on the Sudley road south of Lee Highway. The Ninety-first Infantry Brigade will head the division, followed by the Fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade, 104th Medical Regiment, 121st Engineers, special troops from the District, and the 110th, 111th and 176th Field Artillery. The 104th Quartermaster Regiment will bring up the rear.

Col. Walter W. Burns, commander of the 260th Coast Artillery, today invited the wives and sweethearts of enlisted men of the District National Guard Regiment to attend "surprise" party at Haymarket tomorrow night. Due to lack of time, personal invitations were not issued. Instead, Col. Burns asked that The Post publish a blanket invitation to the ladies of the regiment.

Trucks will leave the National Guard Armory at Sixth and Pennsylvania avenue, at 7:15 p. m. to take the guests to the Haymarket High School where the party will be held. Dancing will stop at 11 o'clock, and the trucks will deliver the ladies to their homes. The Haymarket Board of Education will act as patrons for the dance, Col. Burns said.

An officer at the Armory will phone to camp the name of each lady attending and the soldier whose guest she will be. Officers would not predict what might happen if two or more "sweethearts" show up for one man, but pointed out that plenty of M. P.'s will be on hand.

Battery B of the 260th will give a special exhibition of antiaircraft fire on the Catharpin road one mile north of here at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Other batteries are scattered over a 4-mile raius around Gainesville.

Capt. Perry Huff's battery has been so well camouflaged that only the regiment's officers know where it is located. It was promptly dubbed "The Lost Battalion."

Manassas and Plattsburg Maneuvers Intended to Increase Co-operation Between Regulars, Guard, Reserves, Gen. Drum States

Experts are needed by the Army, Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the First Army, declared yesterday upon his arrival here for an inspection of war games being held by troops of the Third Corps Area at Manassas, Va.

"We need expertness in the Army as in every line of business," Gen. Drum said at Union Station after being welcomed by Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, commander of the Third Corps Area.

"Individual experts must be brought into a mass organization, such as the Army, to gain efficiency," he added.

Gen. Drum explained the Army is trying to increase co-operation between the regular service, the reserves and the National Guard during maneuvers in progress at Manassas and Plattsburg, N. Y.

Explaining he expected to remain in Virginia only for a short stay before going to Plattsburg, he remarked, "On a football team, you put 11 men together and train them to work as a machine. That is what we are trying to do in the Army."

war supplies to Japan may be stopped."

Committee Delays Action

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, at the close of last session, postponed action on the Schwellenbach Japanese embargo bill, and a similar measure by Senator Key Pittman. But the way for Congressional action next session was opened when Secretary Hull abrogated the 1911 commerce and navigation treaty with Japan, which had been viewed as a possible legal barrier to an embargo.

Schwellenbach said in a recent Senate speech that Hull's appeal to airplane manufacturers not to sell to nations which bombed civilian populations already has shown results, and he thought it might be equally so with other supplies.

Exports Generally Down

A survey by the Commerce Department's Far Eastern section of the Division of Regional Information showed exports generally to Japan decreased sharply in June, as compared with May, and for the first half-year dropped to $111,037,000, as against $125,115,000 in the first half of 1938, and $165,541,000 in the same period of 1937.

Shipment of iron and steel scrap moved against this general trend to 1,039,000 tons in the first six months, as compared with 776,000 tons in the same half of last year. Refined copper exports increased from 27,497,000 pounds the first half of 1938 to 121,466,000 pounds the first half of 1939.

While crude petroleum shipments fell off from 13,680,000 barrels in the six months in 1938 to 7,844,000 barrels this year, gasoline exports increased from 426,000 to 467,000 barrels; gas and fuel oil increased from 2,482,000 to 2,957,000 barrels; residual fuel oil rose from 1,014,000 to 2,351,000 barrels, and lubricating oil from 144,000 to 202,000 barrels.

Raw Cotton Exports Off

"Pig iron, wire rods, steel ingots, iron and steel plates, tinplate, aircraft and parts, and automotive products were among the leading commodities in export to Japan that declined during the six months under review," said the department's statement.

The survey noted raw cotton exports to Japan decreased 24 per cent in volume and 25 per cent in value. The department said the general trend downward in most exports reflected "the continued trade restrictions in Japan, with increased difficulty in obtaining necessary exchange permits for imports of foreign merchandise."

United States imports from Japan moved upward in value to $61,487,000 for the first half of this year, against $58,532,000 in the same 1938 period. The department attributed this to the increased value of raw silk, pointing out that volume of silk imports was lower.

Imports of Japanese bleached cotton cloth more than doubled the comparatively small amount purchased last year, and crab meat imports also advanced, but imports of practically all other Japanese manufactured products showed a downward tendency.

Darkness Blots Britain as 500 'Enemy' Planes Test Defenses

Blackout of 25,000 Square Miles Marks Island's Greatest Peacetime Air Maneuvers; 60,000 Soldiers Ready

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Aug. 11.—The blackness of a pit dropped suddenly on London, nerve center of the far-reaching British Empire, at the zero hour of 12:30 this morning, as the whole southeast of England joined in a "blackout" for air defense exercises.

For four hours Englishmen who had to be up and about plodded and crawled through the darkness of an area that covered 25,000 square miles—half of England—while 500 "enemy" bombers roared in from the eastern and southern coasts to see if they could penetrate the defenses of 800 planes and 60,000 air defense soldiers.

Dramatic air raid test was described as a "success" early today by the crews of 500 bombers which swarmed upon cities and countryside from a mythical "enemy nation" in the direction of Germany, the United Press said.

Unable to Fix Location

[Although they spotted occasional patches of light, the "raiders" said it was impossible for them to fix their exact location and that they were compelled to rely solely on night-flying instruments.

[The "blackout" failed, however, to prove conclusively the effectiveness of London's "balloon barrages" because a flight of raiding "Eastland" planes swept down on Kensington at 2:30 a. m. and attacked from 700 feet, the same height as the sausage-like balloons with their dangling steel cables intended to snare enemy planes.—Editor's note]

In an area inclosed by a line drawn straight west from Hull, on the eastern coast, to Stockport, near Manchester, then south to Bournemouth, on the south coast, house lights were turned off or shielded by black paper, street lights were extinguished and traffic lights were visible only through narrow slots.

All roadside lights, electric signs and skylights were turned off.

The business part of London, which is normally quiet at that hour, was in complete darkness.

In the West End, scene of London's night life, darkness hushed merrymakers and only the white shirtfronts of the men and the bare shoulders of women were discernible as Mayfair turned out to watch the blackout with hundreds of thousands of humbler Londoners.

Taxis plodded uncertainly through the gloom, heightened in spots by mist and fog. They showed no running lights, only a faint bar of light through their covered headlights.

Trains ran with drawn blinds and shields over locomotive funnels.

Night factories and newspaper offices worked behind black paper or other shields over the windows.

Special police with white sleeves directed passengers to buses.

The police had no power to order private lighting to be extinguished, but requested householders who were negligent to comply with the blackout.

Searchlights Pierce Gloom

Penciling the night were scores of searchlight beams, seeking to pick out raiders. Now and then a beam traced the outlines of a big silver sausage of the balloon barrage riding its steel cable above the city.

Near gun emplacements hundreds stood silently waiting for the anti-aircraft batteries, London's last line of defense, to go into action.

Outside the city hundreds of fast, hard-hitting Spitfire and Hurricane planes waited for orders to take off to repel bombers reported by detectors and lookouts.

Many pilots and gunners had stood by their planes and guns all day waiting for a break in the weather that had caused a 24-hour postponement of the blackout. But by midnight it had cleared sufficiently for the R. A. F. planes to carry out their part of the maneuvers.

Sporadic raids by invading "Eastland" bombers took place during the day along the east coast. In theory, the defending "Westland" planes had destroyed a large number of the raiders, but the bombers proved that despite superior machine gun armament of the fighters their own defensive guns could account for many casualties.

Basic training planes, North American Aviation, Inc., Inglewood, Calif., $5,707,000; Vultee Aircraft Division, Aviation Manufacturing Corporation, Downey, Calif., $2,-000,000.

Primary training planes, Boeing Airplane Co., Stearman Division, Wichita, Kans., $600,000, with option to buy an additional $2,000,000 worth.

Twin-engined interception pursuit planes, Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, Burbank, Calif., $4,840,000.

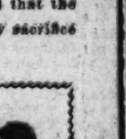
Orders for engines for the planes went to Pratt & Whitney Division, United Aircraft Corporation, Hartford, Conn., $12,320,000; Wright Aeronautical Corporation, Paterson, N. J., $7,000,000; Allison Engine Corporation, Indianapolis, $3,276,000; Aviation Corporation, Lycoming Division, Williamsport, Pa., $270,000.

The deficiency appropriation carried $3,970,000 for naval public works, $6,000,000 for naval armament and ammunition, $4,000,000 to finance the training of more than 10,000 civilian pilots by the Civil Aeronautics Authority in connection with the air expansion program, $10,000,000 for the acquisition and storage of strategic raw war materials generally obtained from foreign sources which might be inaccessible in time of war, $4,461,000 for expansion of military posts and flying field construction, $1,500,000 for construction of a military highway with the Republic of Panama along the Canal Zone, $2,000,000 cash and contract authorization of $9,100,000 for a new aeronautical research station as recommended by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, probably at Sunnyvale, Calif.

House Full of Mosquitoes?

Here's what to do. Close all windows. Use a quick spray and fill each room with a mist of Bee Brand Insect Spray, diluted as you prescribe, from room to room. Let stand closed for 15 minutes. When you reenter the room, the only mosquitoes left will be dead ones on the floor.

Don't confuse Bee Brand Spray with other insecticides. It kills on many surfaces—only a little goes far—and does not stain. And Bee Brand Spray kills flies, moths, roaches and other flying insects quick—yet is entirely safe to use in the home. Don't waste money on cheap, weak, smelly stuff. Get Bee Brand Insect Spray—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back.



NOTE: You can also kill flies and mosquitoes, as well as roaches and ants, with Bee Brand Insect Powder. Read directions on can.

A.F.L. to Rule In Actor Union Dispute Today

Council Waits Report; Green Hopes for Peaceful Settlement

By the United Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 10—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor tonight turned over to a sub-committee a problem which had bedewed the makeup of Hollywood and Broadway celebrities and brought some feminine stars close to tears.

The sub-committee was to meet tonight and report tomorrow afternoon on the problem of who shall have control of actors in the amusement industry's potpourri of unions.

With this word, a five-hour meeting attended by a score of stage and screen luminaries broke up tonight and William Green, president of the A. F. of L., expressed hope that amicable settlement of the bitter differences might be achieved.

Strike Threatened

Otherwise, it has been freely threatened, a strike may break loose in Hollywood and on the legitimate stage which would close the movie studios and darken the theaters of the Nation.

This seaside resort went celebrity daffy during the day of angry charges and the stars divided their time between arguing difficulties in the world's wealthiest trade unions and giving autographs to scores who were able to pierce police lines thrown about hotels, the airport and the railroad station.

Attending today's session were bearers of the following names known to the theater marquees the country over:

Expulsion Cause of Dispute

These were included in the delegation of the Associated Actors and Artists of America. In addition there were, from the American Federation of Actors, Sophie Tucker, A. F. A. president, and Harry Richman, vice president.

The dispute arose over expulsion of the A. F. A. by its parent body, the 4-A, and the subsequent granting of a new charter to the A. F. A. by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes. The 4-A appealed to the A. F. of L., arguing that no international had the right to charter a union which had been expelled by another international.

It appeared tonight that in its settlement the A. F. of L. might attempt to avoid judgment on that question.

Green said that while the I. A. T. S. E. had made no formal application to the federation for jurisdiction over all actors, its spokesmen asserted such a right during the conference.

Report Tomorrow

The committee appointed to report back tomorrow was composed of the following A. F. of L. vice presidents: Matthew Woll, Thomas A. Ricket and Daniel Tobin.

"I appealed to all," Green said, "to meet the situation in a realistic and practical way, to manifest a spirit of tolerance and to explore the situation in an effort to negotiate an agreement, thus settling their difference."

The A. A. A. A., in expelling the A. F. A., had charged diversion of benefit funds to other purposes. Green said the money had been returned subsequently to the original fund.

"The expulsion of Sophie Tucker and Harry Richman and other artists of that kind," Green said, "was the full penalty that could be meted out to them. Surely these artists had not committed any crime which warranted such a drastic penalty. Everyone admitted there had been no shortage, embezzlement or stealing."

Green expressed hope a settlement might be effected which would permit reunion of the A. F. A. with the 4-A group, but had no suggestion to offer as to how this would affect the I. A. T. S. E. claim of jurisdiction over everyone connected with the stage or what might become of the American Guild of Variety Artists, of which Eddie Cantor is president, which was set up by the 4-A to replace the A. F. A.

The stage and movie actors, Green said, were "calm and well behaved" during the meeting. Green said that Miss Tucker, "last of the red-hot mamas," had asserted that, as president of the A. F. A., she "never was conscious of wrongdoing or crime in the organization."

Richman, Green said, had charged that he was "suspended for treason without an opportunity for defense, since he had to keep an engagement in Chicago on the day he was summoned for hearing."

Moran Demands Answers

Ralph Morgan, president of the Screen Actors Guild, demanded of the executive council that it determine whether 4-A had a right to revoke the A. F. A. charter and that it agree with the 4-A contention that the I. A. T. S. E. under the A. F. L. constitution, had no right to issue a charter to an organization expelled by another international of the A. F. L.

"I must have these answers by Sunday," the noted character actor said, "in order to inform a mass meeting of our members in Hollywood on that day what the executive council has done."

At that meeting, Morgan had indicated previously, the S. A. G. may determine whether it will strike.

He demanded also that the council "declared void the alleged charter issued by the I. A. T. S. E. to the A. F. A., which he denounced as "one of the most barefaced jurisdictional raids that I have ever heard of."

Lawrence Tibbett, barytone president of the American Guild of Musical Artists and vice president of the American Federation of Radio Artists, declared "an attempt has been made to raid our jurisdiction in a most shamefully dictatorial manner."

Mischa Auer emerged briefly from the conference room and was escorted by police to an elevator through throngs which jammed the hotel corridors.

"The boss needs a bromide," he explained. "It's furious. Confidentially, it stinks."

Up to that time, the Russian comic said, there had been "no fist fights," no knives drawn, no shooting, no one murdered.

'Back Over the Dam' Orsinger Orders Bullheads

Fred Orsinger, director of the Commerce Building aquarium, learned yesterday that children with "talent," trained pets and fish have at least one thing in common—they can't be depended upon to do their stuff when company comes.

"Now I know why they call 'em bullheads!" he sputtered, exasperated by the refusal of his prodigies to perform. "This is a fine kettle of fish!"

The scamps that let him down were a school of bullheads catfish, about four weeks old, which Orsinger netted Wednesday in the Potomac River for the purpose of studying their swimming habits.

"It's like this," he explained. "Only a few years ago it was discovered that newly hatched bullheads swim together in thick clusters until they grow big enough to strike out on their own. Why, some of these clusters is so thick they remind you of a swarm of bees.

"I thought it would make an interesting exhibit for the public if we had such a colony. So I went out and brought in a batch. So what happens? Either they're shy in front of visitors or they're contrary, or something, but the result is they insist on swimming independently."

Sending a stony glare into the tank of perverse bullheads, he added:

Sues to Block Mate's Virginia Divorce

Mrs. Norvelle A. Jacobsen, 28-year-old clerk, of 3600 New Hampshire avenue northwest, who won a legal separation from her husband for cruelty in 1937, sued in the District Court yesterday to prevent his getting a divorce in Norfolk, Va.

She claimed her husband, Charles J. Jacobsen, a salesman, lives at 1619 Decatur street northwest, instead of in Norfolk. Mrs. Jacobsen's complaint was filed by Attorney Charles L. Norris.

Mrs. Jacobsen said she refused her husband's request that she enlarge the separation decree to a full divorce because her $100-a-month alimony was several months behind. Following this, she said, Jacobsen sued her in Norfolk, charging that she deserted him. His action, she claimed, was to "vex and annoy" her.

She asked District Court to make Jacobsen drop his Norfolk suit and pay her damages for filing it.

Epic Adventure Pictured on Palace Screen; 'Of Human Bondage' Enters the Lists; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

"STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Philip Dunne and Julien Josephson, based on historical research and story outline by Hal Long and Sam Hellman, featuring Spencer Tracy and Sir Cedric Hardwicke, with Nancy Kelly, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull, Henry Travers, Miles Mander, David Torrence, Holmes Herbert, Brandon Hurst, Josephine Crehan, Paul Stanton, Montague Shaw and Hassan Said. Directed by Henry King. Previewed Wednesday night, August 2. At Loew's Palace Theater.

ADHERING WITH FIDELITY to the fundamental facts of an adventure that thrilled the world in the closing years of the nineteenth century, although embellishing them with a considerable amount of decorative fiction, "Stanley and Livingstone" provides exciting entertainment both for those who may be able to recall the pictured events as something within their memory and the newer generations to whom the story of an heroic exploit in the African jungles may come as something new.

BELL

It is obvious that great effort was expended upon this Twentieth Century-Fox major production, which yesterday was presented for the first time on a public screen in Washington at Loew's Palace Theater. The African scenes, which dominate the picture, actually were filmed in Africa, a sterling cast does full justice to the pivotal roles and an effective touch has been lent the development of the narrative by the introduction of the off-screen voice of Spencer Tracy, in the role of Stanley, reading entries from the pages of his daily diary after the manner of a newsreel commentator. Photography of the most expert sort endows many picturesque sequences with great visual beauty.

The picture goes back to the Indian Wars of the 1870's for its introduction of the character of Henry M. Stanley, star reporter on the late James Gordon Bennett's New York Herald. Stanley defies the Indians, the commanding officers of the United States troops and even a Presidential commission, to establish the sort of intrepid and hard-boiled newspaperman he really is. Back in New York, Bennett loses no time in making known that his next assignment is to go find Livingstone, British explorer and missionary, missing for many months and reported dead by the London press controlled by Lord Tyce, Bennett's arch rival in the field of journalism. The action moves then to the Dark Continent where a fictional romantic vein is introduced with utmost deftness. Stanley falls in love with the daughter of a stanch friend of Lord Tyce's and pursues his monumental task buoyed constantly by the inspiration of his unspoken love for the young woman whom he was to return to find the bride of Gareth Tyce, who failed in the mission he has successfully accomplished. This portion of the picture's movement constitutes the chief item of "decorative embellishment" to which reference already has been made.

Heroism in the Jungle

It is after the Stanley safari has penetrated into the unknown vastness of the African wilds that the outline of an epic adventure begins to appear. Enemy attacks, sickness, privation, death and the constant threat of unknown dangers harass the man who has vowed not to return to civilization until he has found Livingstone. One of the great moments of the picture occurs when Stanley and Livingstone stand face to face for the first time and Stanley remarks simply, "Dr. Livingstone, I presume." It is at this point that the film play takes on its greatest dignity and power of purpose. Stanley perceives in Dr. Livingstone the embodiment of a great work being carried on single-handed among the primitive people of the continent. His conversion to the Livingstone point of view and his realization of the mighty work the man is doing pave the way for a profoundly moving climax.

This is reached when the Royal Geographical Society, led by the bitterly resentful Lord Tyce, refuses to approve the evidence that Livingstone still lives, brought back to London by Stanley for their examination. It is here, as I have reported before, that the picture takes on something the flavor of the closing scenes in "The Life of Emile Zola," or "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell." It is here, too, that Spencer Tracy's performance reaches its peak.

Cast Uniformly Excellent

Tracy's portrayal of the role of Stanley is repressed and forceful throughout the earlier footages of the film, but at this point takes on the fire and vigor needed to give it commanding power. Tracy, however, is not the only one who contributes notably to the superior playing that marks the entire course of the picture. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, in the companion title-role, as the man who was neither lost nor hiding, turns in one of his most impressive characterizations. The same may be said of Charles Coburn, as Lord Tyce, and Nancy Kelly, in the sympathetic role of Eve Kingsley. Richard Greene, as the younger Tyce; Henry Travers, as an official of The Crown, who has been in Africa too long for his own good; Henry Hull, as Bennett, and the long list of others whose names appear in the small-type paragraph preceding these comments all add in varying degrees to the excellence of the film. In the role of Jeff Slocum, reformed Indian scout, Walter Brennan is the comedy mainstay of the picture from first flash to last. He is unconsciously aided by several of the African tribesmen who swarm through the action.

The length of "Stanley and Livingstone" and the variety of action it affords leave little room for an elaborate display of supplementary attractions at the Palace this week. There is room enough, fortunately, for more of Robert Benchley's drollery in "Home Early," "The Bear That Couldn't Sleep" and the picturized News of the Day. Together, they round out a superlative bill.

Because it was practically ignored back in 1934 as one of the best pictures of the year, Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller, efficient mainspring of the Little Theater, would like to have it stressed that "Of Human Bondage," costarring Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, is not being "revived" at the Little Theater this week. The picture, it seems, has been officially reissued and Mrs. Miller now enters it as an active contender for first place among the "Ten Best Pictures of 1939." There are many who will vote on her side—so many, in fact, that the picture is being held over for a second week, as its merit completely justifies.

At last they have succeeded in knocking the 16 Earle Roxyettes off their feet! Heretofore, their astonishingly versatile bag of tricks have been upright. Beginning today, however, they will contort all over the place at the Earle. For the first time since their engagement opened, the Roxyettes will be seen in an acrobatic routine—"Beach Acrobatics"— against a beach terrace background. Wearing what, Mr. Anger?

Stars Don Gloves To Spike Rumors

Thoroughly annoyed by persistently printed rumors that they were not speaking, that they fought openly on the set and that their director, Edmund Goulding, had to use every ounce of his diplomacy to keep them from each other's throats while they played their scenes in "The Old Maid," Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins hit upon the perfect way to correct the errors.

Borrowing boxing gloves from the property department, they "fought" a brisk one-minute round while a still cameraman snapped a series of action shots which they sent to gossip columnists.

"It's easy to understand how the rumors started," Miss Davis said. "It's a Hollywood tradition that two female stars can't get along in the same picture. Our acquaintances know that Miriam and I are the best of friends and that we thoroughly enjoy working together. Maybe our boxing pictures will stop the nonsense."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 10 (INS).—What London thinks and how her English friends regard her divorce from Capt. Philip Astley will not concern Madeleine Carroll on this trip abroad. She won't go near her home town, but will confine her entire visit to the continent. Only Madeleine's close friends knew how really upset she was when the attractive captain let her know he thought it was time they said adieu to their marriage. She is due back here in October and today word was sent her that Douglas Fairbanks, jr., had been signed to costar with her in "Safari," Paramount African jungle picture.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Young Doug starts Monday in "Green Hell" and "Safari" follows, with E. H. Griffith directing. Para certainly moved heaven and earth to get Doug. I reckon all that Eastern hullabaloo helped his stock considerably, for I am told there were offers from practically every company waiting for him. He plays a guide in "Safari" and Madeleine will be seen as a rich society woman.

Surely you remember the furore J. T. Caldwell's "Dynasty of Death" created when it first came out in 1938. Walter Wanger, who has had his eye on this sensational yarn ever since its publication, today walked away with the prize when he planked down a cool $50,000 for the screen rights. Based on the exploits of the war lords and arms manufacturers, it is as timely as tomorrow's headlines—and you can bank on it that Walter will give "Dynasty" a whooping production, with a worthwhile cast, for he has been trying to buy the book for months.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The pretty, dark-haired girl with Alex D'Arcy at Hugo's was Norma Hall. What happened to his every night dates with Arleen Whelan? Priscilla Lawson is rumored on her way to Europe and the gossips say she and Alan Curtis are again on the verge; Irene Dunne, lunching at the Brown Derby with Mrs. James Farley, nervous over her preview "When Tomorrow Comes." But she is always jittery about every picture she makes. Maybe that's why she is always good; the Herb Polesies welcomed a 6-pound boy today and papa was passing out the cigars; Alice Faye and Tony Martin cheered themselves hoarse when a typical movie home run saved the day for the Hollywood stars. Art Nehf, formerly with the Cubs, was an interested onlooker as were Dr. Charles Phillips, Binnie Barnes, Mike Frankovich and dozens of other baseball minded folk.

Betty Grable goes to New York for the Buddy De Sylva-Cole Porter musical, now that her rift with Jackie Coogan is final, as we exclusively predicted; Jean Hersholt will entertain Prince George of Denmark when he arrives in Hollywood in September; Marcele Rogez, French star vacationing in Hollywood, escorted to the Dunne-Boyer premiere by Wesley Ruggles; Lupe Valez's newest boy friend is La Clayton Moore, young Hollywood actor; Claudette Colbert's mother is suffering from a strep throat; Howard Hughes glimpsed at the Brown Derby with Dolly Hunt, socialite, who recently obtained her marital freedom; Kay Griffith and John Howard are said to be finally altarbound; Frances Meighan leaves Friday to join her sister, Blanche Ring, in New York; Claire Trevor is nursing a badly sprained shoulder.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 10.—While some people have success handed to them on a silver platter, the majority have to get it the hard way. And one reason so many bit players like to go on location is that they never know what's going to happen. Gene Coogan, Hollywood handy man, went to the wilds of Idaho with the "Northwest Passage" troupe. And—there's a tale hangs a tale. When Bob Young and Walter Brennon were shooting the rapids and their canoe capsized, Gene without a moment's hesitation jumped off a 20-foot cliff and saved them. So in admiration of his heroism King Vidor gave him an hysterical scene opposite Spencer Tracy. Which he did so well that it's been built into a large part. But when the scene was completed Spence turned to him and said: "Why, I had no idea you were an actor." Gene grinned, said: "Neither had I."

HOPPER

Harry Crocker went to Santa Barbara a day ahead of fiesta parade trying to find a horse that would out-step Leo Carrillo's. No luck. Leo's was trained to go first. At one of the parties up there, guests Bob Benchley and John McClain changed places with waiters and vice versa. Yes, Heaven helped the hostess!

Not 'til I saw the glazed look in eyes of his worshipers, did I realize the hold Benny Goodman has. Seems he borrowed Emperor Jones drum and woo-doos them all over the place. But if he gave you halt as much sound, he'd be 100 times better. Alex Templeton doing a guest spot at Victor Hugo makes you realize what the screen is losing. Why not team him with Shirley Temple, Deanna Durbin or one of our young players? Don't know why they're so oblivious to his possibilities. While at the same time, due to fact that Lily Pons has drawn packed houses at all summer concerts, they're again in a frenzy trying to find something that will suit her. Even though she's failed in each screen appearance.

New York's in stitches again. This time sewing on bustles so the gentlemen can bump them in the new, Eastside dance craze called Boops-a-Daisy. While Chamberlain sulks, his Lords and Ladies are bumping their bustles.

Graduating from writing to producing (now they do both) has slowed down Baker and Towne considerably. They used to dictate to shorts. Now they suffer fully dressed.

Only fly in Elsa Maxwell's overflowing bowl of social happiness at Cannes is the fact that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor still won't speak to her.

Woody Van Dyke refused services of a baby expert when he used 18 kids in "The Thin Man." With two of his own at home, another on its way, he felt able to cope with the situation on the set. Mothers agreed—seems they don't like experts either.

With the out-of-towns premiers at a premium, Boris Morris has thought up a new one. The locale of "The Flying Deuces" is Paris, France. Sure, he'll have a gala opening. He's sending the film without stars or critics, to Paris, Kentucky.

Hal Roach wanted Burgess Meredith to sign up for eight pictures (such optimism) before giving him "Of Mice and Men." Burgess said no! Burgess is visiting Jimmie Stewart at his house here, while Jimmie lives in Meredith's penthouse in New York. Quite a get together boys.

Raymond Massey lunching at R. K. O. in his Lincoln make-up. He adds nose and ears. A still photographer wanted some pictures of the Massey profile, but due to red tape it was an hour before he got an okay. By that time, Massey had snapped his nose off.

Jack Hively, who is directing "Three Sons" has a grand idea for a new kind of benefit, now that so many of our people have gone musical. Garson Kanin plays the saxophone, his brother, Michael, a mandolin, Hively, a clarinet. They'd like Frances Marion at the piano, Jackie Cooper at the drums, Darryl Zanuck as the crooner—you know he's been doing it lately—with Eddie Robinson leading. And Frank Morgan master of ceremonies. Then too, they could take their jokes along with their top hats, out of boxes for an airing.

Grady Sutton approached Hively the other day and said: "I have to look a year older in my next scene. What shall I do?" "Just wear a new tie. That will do it."

St. Quentin Told About Smuggling, Welles Reveals

By the Associated Press

Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, disclosed yesterday the French Ambassador, Count Rene de St. Quentin, had voluntarily informed the State Department last March of the misuse of French diplomatic pouches, as charged in a Federal grand jury presentment yesterday at New York.

Welles said the French Ambassador called at the State Department in March on his own initiative, expressed regret and said an administrative inquiry would be made and disciplinary measures taken in France.

The grand jury presentment said the French ministry of foreign affairs conspired to smuggle commercial films into the United States.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Aug. 10.

Vivien Segal, who will tour with the road-show revival of "I Married An Angel," is treasuring the review of her performance in "Puck"—when a critic wrote "the role fitted her better than her tights" . . . George S. Kaufman, contributing to the Dutch Treat Club's book, wrote: "There are three things I rebel at each morn . . . the objects of all my decrying . . . The first of the trio is sheer getting-born . . . and the others are living and dying" . . . A local blue blood, after too much drinking, insulted an experienced Broadwayite in a night club, after the other guests had gone. The blueblood was flattened with one punch. His assailant then lifted the unconscious man's hand, and broke all the knuckles—to prove self-defense in case of trouble.

Al Lyman planned to revive his much-publicized romance with Mary McCormack, but was dissuaded. "She's so well known in grand opera," Lyman explained, "and 'Mr. Abe McCormack' would look terrible in print" . . . Jascha Heifetz has mastered two difficult violin stunts. He can play the most intricate compositions using a bow with only a single hair on it. And he can play a complete composition slightly off-key, which is harder than playing it correctly . . . Milton Berle, who appeared in a newsreel shot a few days ago, got more laughs from that one appearance than he drew from all the pictures he ever made in Hollywood.

Laurence Olivier, who has gone to Hollywood, had one unfortunate experience there. He had been signed to play opposite Greta Garbo in "Queen Christina," and when, in a love scene, he placed his arms around Greta, she shrank from him and moaned: "Awww, nahw" . . . The director suggested that Olivier become better acquainted with her and talk to Greta about places both had visited. And so for five hours, Olivier enthused about the fjords of Norway, Swedish sunsets and the twilight in Scandinavia . . . But then Olivier packed his bags, returned in disgust to England, and another replaced him in the movie—all because Garbo's only reaction to his conversation had been "Awwww, life ees sotch a faunny theenk."

Jimmy Gleason, the veteran comic, is exhibiting a cauliflower ear—not from a punch, but from a polo ball . . . Ignace Jan Paderewski, who retired to his home in Poland, insists that he'll never appear on a radio program again. "When I start to play," he explains, "I must play uninterruptedly. I cannot have any of my renditions broken up by any advice to buy bath salts or shaving cream" George Olsen refused to accept an engagement in Saratoga, at $5,000 a week—because the management wouldn't pay transportation costs, amounting to about $150. Another band was hired, and Olsen attended the opening, visited the gambling rooms in the cafe—and reappeared two hours later with $5,000 less in his pockets.

Fred Fisher, the veteran songwriter and author of "Dardanell," expects to return to Hollywood shortly . . . When he was here last year, Fisher was assigned to a director engaged in screening a story with a tragic ending. The script included a sequence calling for the playing of Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C Minor . . . "Dammit," the director exploded, "we can't use that tune. It's too short" . . . "Too short?" Fischer volunteered, seating himself at the piano. "That's a cinch to fix. Just get me a pencil."

Entirely Consistent

President Roosevelt's request that the heads of all executive agencies effect "substantial savings" is not in the least inconsistent with his advocacy of pump-priming. Even the most ardent believer in lavish spending as an aid to recovery would hardly maintain that waste of the taxpayers' money is immaterial, provided it is put into circulation.

If waste is tolerated in Government service, the incentive to improve methods of procedure and to eliminate useless activities is automatically weakened. On the other hand, pressure to effect economies without impairment of functional performance is always a spur to efficiency. Moreover, the dollar spent to prime the business pump, as well as the dollar used to defray running costs of regular Government establishments accomplishes more when economical utilization of appropriated funds is assured.

The President has shown good judgment in refraining from suggestions as to the amount departmental heads should try to cut from their appropriations. Efforts to reduce governmental running costs by setting some arbitrary percentage cut have failed repeatedly in the past, for obvious reasons. The extent of the reductions in outlays that can be made without the impairment of essential services naturally varies greatly from department to department and is a matter for the determination of responsible administrative officials.

Heretofore, the President has emphasized that the reorganization program was not designed primarily to reduce the cost of Government, but rather to increase administrative efficiency. Now, with reorganization orders issued and in process of being executed, he seems disposed to take a more optimistic view of the opportunities for economy resulting from changes in the administrative set-up.

Whether or not the President's hopes of "substantial" savings are immediately realized, this latest economy drive will undoubtedly have a salutary disciplinary effect upon the Government personnel. Ultimately, improved morale will doubtless be reflected in more economical as well as more efficient administration of Government affairs.

Courageous Act

Yugoslavia's extraordinarily difficult position vis-a-vis Germany and Italy makes all the more striking the refusal of the kingdom to be tied to the Berlin-Rome military chariot.

The demands reported to have been made by Germany and Italy on the Belgrade government did not go so far as to require Yugoslavia to join the axis. But were Yugoslavia to agree to all that the axis powers have asked of her she would become to all intents and purposes an ally of the axis, regardless of the absence of any formal commitments. For she would then be pledged in the event of a European war to permit Germany and Italy to use her railroads and military centers, permit those powers to supervise her economic life, and guarantee them complete access to her war materials and foodstuffs.

Yugoslavia, however, prefers to be neutral. For this reason she has turned down the German-Italian demands. And it took a great deal of courage to do so. With Italy dominating the Adriatic and in complete control of Albania, which lies to the south and southwest of Yugoslavia, and with Germany pressing down from the north, it is obviously dangerous for the kingdom to court the ill will of the axis.

Furthermore, her economic life is to a very large extent at the mercy of the totalitarian powers. Last year over 42 per cent of all of Yugoslavia's exports went to Germany (including Austria) and that total has since risen because of the Nazi annexation of Bohemia and Moravia. An additional 6.43 per cent went to Italy. At the same time the axis powers supplied Yugoslavia with almost half of all her imports.

The only saving aspect of Yugoslavia's situation is that it is not to Italy's long-run interests to have her destroyed, for her destruction would almost certainly bring Germany to the Adriatic, which Italians like to regard as an Italian lake. Unless, therefore, Italy has completely become a satellite of the Third Reich with no capacity for independent action, Yugoslavia is still in a position to play off one axis power against another and continue to enjoy a precarious neutrality. Nonetheless, her lot at the moment is anything but a happy one.

Young Politicians

Mr. Pitt Maner, the national president of the Young Democrats, now holding their annual convention in Pittsburgh, is much exercized over the operation of the newly enacted Hatch law. "I have not yet found one Young Democrat who is for it," he observes.

The remark misses fire, if intended to reflect upon the desirability of legislation designed to insure that Government employes shall be precisely that, and not aspiring politicians. The disparagement is not of the Hatch law. It is of the Young Democrats themselves.

There is something really sad about the resentment of this political club toward a long overdue and modest attempt to make Government service a more inspiring and honorable career. The reactionary attitude might be expected if the Pittsburgh convention were composed of hard-boiled professionals, fat old ward heelers trained in the school of Hines or Pendergast. But the delegates are all, by definition, "young Democrats," and as such should be expected to raise a standard of idealism for their elders.

Not merely that, but in this matter they might also reasonably be expected to follow the leadership of President Roosevelt, who in signing the Hatch bill last week defined it as "at least a step in the right direction."

Moreover, many of Mr. Roosevelt's public pronouncements encourage the belief that personally he would like to go further in eliminating politics from the Government service. One recalls his address at American University, early in 1934, when he told his audience that "We need a trained personnel in Government. We need disinterested, as well as broad-gauged public officials. This part of our problem we have not yet solved, but it can be solved."

The Hatch law, as the President agreed last week, is a part—and a substantial part—of the solution. So it is difficult to find either truth, or sense, or even decent respect for the expressed philosophy of his party leader in Mr. Maner's assertion that the Hatch law is the "most un-American piece of legislation that has been passed by Congress in the last 25 years."

The most useful work which the current convention of Young Democrats could do for that party would be a flat and resounding repudiation of these extraordinary statements by their national president—spelled with a very small "p." Senator Hatch suggests that the attitude of Mr. Maner reveals either "complete ignorance" or "total lack of sympathy" for the fundamental principles of the Democratic Party. There is the further possibility that both factors are operative.

Preparing Ahead

The last great war in which this country was involved impressed the Nation with the importance of economic preparedness. For the effective defense of a country in time of war depends upon the ability of its industries to supply not only the actual weapons of warfare but also the food, clothing and other supplies needed by the fighting forces. Indeed, adequate prosecution of a modern war, necessitates a revolutionary readjustment of industrial processes to meet the terrific strain of actual hostilities in addition to providing for the civilian population.

As a preliminary to mobilization of the Nation's economic resources, the Army and Navy Munitions Board has made prolonged and exhaustive studies of the Nation's industries, with a view to determining the nature and extent of the contribution they could make in case of an emergency. Work of this kind, however, presupposes co-operation on the part of industry itself. If that co-operation should fail to materialize, the best-laid defense plans would be thwarted.

For that reason the appointment of four leading industrialists, the head of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a well-known economist to serve as a civilian advisory committee to the Army and Navy Munitions Board is very wise strategy. While the knowledge of members will be useful in perfecting and modifying preparedness plans, the chief value of the committee will lie in the advice and assistance it can give in helping to formulate mobilization policies.

A civilian agency of this kind is exceptionally well equipped to enlist the voluntary support of industrial groups. Furthermore, its very existence is a reassuring indication that the Government regards national defense as a co-operative undertaking, not a program to be carried out at the command of Army and Navy without prior consultation.

Mrs. Cummings

Perhaps the ideal hostess is sometimes born already imbued with all the necessary characteristics. But more often these characteristics are carefully acquired, on a basis of intelligence, understanding, sympathy, patience and other pleasing qualities which too few mortals possess in large proportions.

High in the category of those who have developed talents to serve a harmonious end was Mrs. Homer Cummings, whose death is the more regretted because occurring at such a relatively early age. With a skill the greater because never obtrusive she had carved for herself a niche in Washington which all admired and none resented.

The sympathy of many goes out to the former Attorney General in his tragic loss. May it be mitigated by realization that the community sincerely shares his sorrow.

Plain Ignorance

Our case is undoubtedly more shameful than that of the woodcutter of Fontainbleau, who after Waterloo appalled everybody by confessing that he had never heard of Napoleon. After all, the poor fellow probably never pretended to have heard of much. And he may have been a very good man at his own specialty.

At this very moment, no doubt, trusting readers are waiting for us to explain why the visitation of two young persons named Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney threw so many residents of the Capital of a great Nation into a fair-sized dither. It goes without saying that these two young persons must be very important in some way or other, because our Mr. Hazen was at pains to present each of them with a key to the city.

Yet, and honest confession is good for the soul, we had never before heard even faintly of this Miss Garland nor very precisely of this Mr. Rooney. For which reason we shall henceforth treasure the more a remark of great acumen made by the latter. "Nothing better than a key to a city," he told Commissioner Hazen. Washingtonians, who for years have been longing vainly for even a key to a ballot booth, know with what wisdom he spoke.

That we should have failed to identify a young man of such political genius or a young lady of such—shall we say—presence, is of course scandalous, and we admit it. Henceforth, if anybody is so tactless as to ask what is wrong with our editorials, candor will compel the answer that Dr. Johnson gave to the lady who asked why he had defined "pastern" as the knee of a horse. "Plain ignorance, ma'am, plain ignorance."

And wouldn't it be tragic, if because of our ignorance, somebody's high-pressure publicity agent should be called on the carpet?

Destiny And Dentistry

That the shape of Cleopatra's nose had much to do with the subsequent history of mankind has long been contended. Now along come the orthodontists, claiming that the Egyptian queen's third molars (wisdom teeth) had perhaps as much to do with man's fate as her nasal index.

Perhaps the importance of teeth has never been sufficiently stressed from the viewpoint of economic, political and sociological trends. So common a practice as extracting first molars in children, according to one authority in a recent issue of The Journal of School Health, is "fraught with dangers which jeopardize (not only) the dentition as a whole . . . but leave their mark forever on the health and facial appearance of the growing child."

These dangers, the article goes on to assert, "may initiate a complex of unfavorable sequelae ranging from general bodily disturbances to mental aberrations leading among other things to difficulty in obtaining employment and general maladjustment to environment."

Research into the impacted, off-ridge, or yanked-out first and second molars of Nebuchadnezzar, Genghis Khan, Torquemada, Ivan the Terrible, Napoleon and Hitler may bring to light some curious facts. Maybe it was the absence of scientific dentistry, rather than inflated ego, that caused these masters of ceremony to lead mankind such a merry dance!

Abuse Of A Privilege

The Acting Secretary of State reveals that as far back as last March the French Ambassador, Count Rene de St. Quentin, voluntarily informed the Department of State of the misuse of French diplomatic pouches. That intolerable offense has now been brought to public attention by a Federal grand jury presentment in New York.

The actual amount of merchandise involved in this smuggling was not great—approximately 37,000 feet of moving-picture films, the duty on which would have amounted to around $1,100. But this does not in any respect mitigate the offense involved, nor in any degree lessen the responsibility of the French government in tracking down and punishing those in the foreign office who permitted the films to be brought in illegally.

Definite assurance that punitive action will be taken has already been given by the French Ambassador to the Department of State. He has informed the department that an administrative inquiry is being made and that disciplinary measures will be taken against those responsible for this flagrant abuse of a diplomatic courtesy. Those measures are as much the due of the French Embassy, wholly innocent of any complicity in the affair, as they are owing to this Government.

Spiritual Slums

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by one of Westbrook Pegler's latest columns that it's not only the "material squalor" that is undermining the Nation but also the "spiritual squalor" of too many divorces. What new kind of ballyhoo is this? Recently one of our eminent anti-New Dealers shook his fist at the First Lady for not stopping at one highball, and now we have Pegler getting spiritual on us with a vengeance against a certain member of the Roosevelt family, who made a radio speech condemning slums.

My child was almost born in the Washington slums, but fortunately we were given a home in a Government housing project. I don't believe the spiritual life of that child will be hampered by too much sun or cross ventilation. Furthermore, any crackpot who would deprive us of those things we have obtained from the New Deal will find us ready to defend and fight for them regardless of who wins the 1940 elections.

Keep Us Out

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Twenty-five years after the opening of hostilities preceding the greatest man-made slaughter the world has known we read and hear of the terror that now grips Europe and the Far East.

The tramping and steady tread of millions of soldiers strikes fear into the very soul of the peace-loving world. Remembering all the young men who died uselessly in the "war to end all wars," I feel confident that I speak for all the level-headed young Americans when I say "Keep us out of foreign wars; only a war of national defense is just cause for the youngsters of today to participate." ELMER H. McCUSKER.

Mercy for Dogs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the advent of the heated season there arises in every community dozens of ordinances dealing with dogs.

In the main these are more or less sensible and necessary, but I have never read of any set of municipal laws for the benefiting of dogs. True the S. P. C. A. has done splendid work toward their protection, but the vast bulk of laws are anti-dog. They must be muzzled. They must be kept on a leash. They must not stray from home. They must be regarded as rabid until proved otherwise.

Why not supplement these regulations somewhat as follows: Provide for the placing of low drinking dishes at intervals in yards and on the street and keeping them filled with fresh, cool water. This to save dogs from thirst torture and its results. Children should see that their pets have fresh, cool water, constantly, and should avoid taking them out on a leash in the heated part of the day.

These two precautions alone would not only be of infinite mercy to all dogs, but would greatly lessen and perhaps cause rabies to disappear altogether.

I insist upon merciful types of muzzles and leashes, and give dogs as much freedom and exercise as their surroundings will permit. In short—a little more mercy—and a little less law.

MRS. C. W. BAILEY.
Rome, Ga., Aug. 9.

Ignorance Of History Scored

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been much interested in the American Institute of Public Opinion (Gallup) poll on the third term which was published in your July 30 issue. It is a sad commentary on the lack of intelligence of a considerable percentage of the population; if not lack of intelligence, then indifference, forgetfulness or just plain laziness.

Take, for instance, the question: "As far as you know, has any President of the United States ever served a third term?" The answers were: No, 85 per cent; yes, 3 per cent; don't know, 12 per cent. Adding those who were frank enough to say that they do not know to those whose answers were wrong, we have 15 per cent who were ignorant, nearly one-sixth of the population, of the simple facts of American history.

Even more remarkable was the next question: "As far as you know, does the Constitution of the United States say that a President cannot serve a third term?" The answers were: Yes, 4 per cent; no, 78 per cent; don't know, 18 per cent. Adding the "don't knows" to those whose answers were wrong, we have the enormous proportion of 22 per cent of our population, over one-fifth, who do not know the provisions of the Constitution regarding the Presidency.

We have heard the expression: "One hundred per cent American." The truth is, "there ain't no such animal." Many native-born citizens, when examined on their knowledge of their country's institutions, can hardly attain a passing mark of 75 per cent. The great majority would rate much less than 65 per cent. Do you know the difference between the jurisdiction of a Federal district court and an ordinary State circuit court? Do you know on what subjects Congress can legislate, and those concerning which it has no authority?

Are the powers of Congress specifically enumerated? Are certain rights reserved to the States? Are you acquainted with the duties, responsibilities and limitations of the Presidency and its relation to the legislative and judicial branches? Do you know what an ex post facto law is, and can Congress pass one? Do you know what is meant by the Bill of Rights, and where may it be found?

It does not require even a high-school education for a person to be familiar with the fundamental principles on which this Government is founded. Ordinary intelligence is sufficient. It is most surprising and, in fact, most distressing to me to witness the ignorance of even some of our college-trained people when compared with the knowledge of our institutions possessed by some of those of foreign birth.

Perhaps this may be explained by the fact that the foreign-born study civil government in their majority when seeking citizenship, while the native-born citizen who had the subject in his youth has now forgotten it or is too indifferent or lazy to care much about it. Some naturalized citizens are better supporters of our institutions than our native-born citizens.

When I was in the eighth grade in the District of Columbia public schools we had a textbook, "Fiske's Civil Government," in which I became intensely interested. I commend to all persons the study of our Constitution in connection with any good textbook on civil government. Such reading would be more beneficial and educational than a reading of the latest "best seller," the usual "triangle" movie story, or listening to the raucous cacophony which is known by the names of "jazz" and "the blues."

Wake up, America, before you die like ancient Rome! H. C. G.
Washington, Aug. 8.

Our Problem

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can it be that there is something radically wrong with mankind's selection of standards? Has patriotism "bogged down?" Is parenthood "all washed up?" Has the press abandoned the role of "beacon" for that of "barker?" In short, has the materialistic conception of life blurred our spiritual vision and dulled our edge of sportsmanship?

Look at the deluge of hate and pride that has already engulfed Asia and bids fair to do the same with Europe. Perhaps it would save us if we could arrange to have our Government, politicians and press emulate the wisdom that has characterized the behavior of such nations as Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland and Switzerland. These nations all managed to keep out of "the 1914-1918 mess." The so-called enlightened nations did not.

Isn't it a fact that every time we took sides we only managed to dump a sizable market into the laps of America's industrial rivals and debtors? On whose pay roll are those so-called statesmen and diplomats riding, Uncle Sam's or Europe's? The profits are Europe's, why shouldn't Europe pay them?

Won't somebody please call "time out" on "international nagging" and devote it to evolving a plan to getting our 10,000,000 unemployed Americans back to work. It's our only serious problem, and we should not permit any cunningly timed propaganda to so divert us from a solution of our own problems by the emission of a veritable deluge of sentimental considerations.

Let's deal out some patience and co-operation to our good customers. The resulting good business will help unemployment. Wake up, America! ANONE.
Allenhurst, N. J.

Wants to Shoot

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Yesterday I witnessed the disgusting spectacle of a hatless and coatless police officer chasing a grown up youth. The officer was trailing the fugitive by possibly 50 feet, the latter ducking and dodging in escaping capture. This exhibition was sport for the neighboring inhabitants who were laughing and offering encouragement to the one pursued. Two more officers afoot and a third in a scout car were trying to follow up.

Is it possible that our officers are forced to "run down" offenders when six-shooters are available at the officers belt? What delicate principle is involved in a ruling which would prohibit an officer in like circumstance from shooting the legs out from under an offender who has been ordered to halt and will not comply? What are the qualifications of a police officer? Marathon runner? Four-hundred meter? One hundred-yard dash? And if they can run down their man they may make an arrest?

CHAGRINED.

Stourbridge Lion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much interested in the story appearing in The Post of August 9 regarding the "Stourbridge Lion." On a visit to the New York World's Fair in June I saw this engine and many others which take part in the dramatic story, "Railroads on Parade." I didn't realize until I read your article that the "Stourbridge Lion" was such a famous relic. It still operates under its own power in "Railroads on Parade." The comparison between this engine and the modern streamline moguls which climax the show emphasizes the tremendous progress these United States have made during the past century.

The progress of the country has been definitely indentified with the development and progress of the railroads. R. J. Q.

Dislikes Pegler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I find your paper very stimulating, particularly the foreign policy. Your columnists are good. In fact, the paper is quite the best in the city.

However, I write this with but one purpose, namely, to learn why you continue to use Mr. Westbrook Pegler's nonsense. He seems entirely irresponsible in his statements about labor and the Government, as well as every other subject he uses. I find it not only boring but extremely irritating to read him.

I believe your paper would profit by his retirement.

The Post Impressionist

Uncle Hutt

TRADITION placed his home over a mountain graveyard—the resting place of Indians and slaves. In the spring and summer his house was framed by flowers and foliage—the white blooms of locust and dogwood, while redbuds flamed between the higher oaks and poplars. Winter left the house forlorn, threatening to roll from its supports down the mountain, to lie forgotten in the red Virginia galls beside a decrepit one-horse spring wagon. The very atmosphere of the place seemed permeated with a past that refused to leave it, more clinging than lichens on the rocks.

"Hants don't bother me," said Uncle Hutt. "I figure they ain't nothing to me that a hant would want. If they need room I'll move, but I don't aim to be a mite of bother."

He led a simple life unfettered by learning. He couldn't read or cipher, didn't seem to care. His problems were immediate and close, and had to do with growing things or when to butcher hogs, or split timber for a fence.

Almanacs and science were for educated folks. He knew when hornets built nests on the ground he'd need a lot of winter wood and food for stock, and when the varmints swung high in the trees a man could work 'most all the winter in the open. Clouds in the Gap meant rain and "W" on locust wings meant war. He watched the moon and stuck things in the ground when it hung right, put leather 'round his children's throats to ward off colds and on his wrist a half-inch copper band. "Hit holps to draw the misery out," he said.

He hunted ginseng, trapped the woodchuck and the rabbit, drank sassafras tea in spring, had crackling bread and sausage in the fall, claimed witches put burrs and tangles in his horse's mane, brewed liquor for his friends and left all churching to his wife. "I figger God'ull help a body when hit's needed," he said. "We don't need to rush Him none."

Every other Saturday night Uncle Hutt had an overall boiling. While he made a fire, put the iron pot on stove, set the rinsing tub out and cut a piece of home-made soap, I would assemble a portable phonograph. There was one issue Uncle Hutt always settled before he started the wash; I had to have a well-balanced collection of songs. Once I inadvertently mixed Shubert's Serenade, Debussy, Johann Strauss and Beethoven with Josh Billings, "Preacher and the Bear," "Old-Time Religion," "Wreck of 97," and "Rabbit in the Pea Patch." Uncle Hutt pawed the records and studied over gadgets on the machine. He snuffled his mustache and remarked: "Iffen you air playing this here for me, I don't want none of that fancy stuff. I reckon iffen I was to hear hit every day I would be used to hit, but all I wants is good old henscratching music I kin understand. That there fancy stuff is some tiresome. I don't see how men folks kin put up with such truck."

Uncle Hutt was considerably clever and in many ways ahead of his time. One time he laid off a design on a shoebox, punched parallel rows of holes in the shape of a cross and inserted match sticks. He stated that he was making a game of shoebox checkers. "Fo' kin play, and iffen they ain't that many, one'ull do. Hit's a powerful good game to keep your mind from a-wandering on your troubles." In the hills, this game antedated urbane Chinese checkers by a decade.

The only time Uncle Hutt ever expressed a desire to roam beyond Panther Gap was when he disclosed that he aimed to build an airplane out of his cousin's Model T.

"I've sot my mind to hit," he said. "This here ar'plane will be a rale one for a fact. I figgered hit so's I kin make it stay up in the ar' and not come down lessen I wants hit to. I aim to make hits wings flap like a buzzard's iffen the engine stops. I reckon a body could fly clean to Washington and get a job in the Gov'mint."

Hemmed in by the hills and a pattern of life but slightly changed since early days, Uncle Hutt retains the clannish hospitality and the Anglo-Saxon superstitions of his forbears, whose handiwork can still be seen in the old log cabins, a few brick mansions and the old road-bed, not quite obliterated by forest and pasture, marking the route of wagon trains and travelers from western mountains to the James.

A hard-surfaced road curves between the red clay banks, and the crossroads store has a phone and 'lectric lights, but hill farms are too small for tractors and hill homes remain unchanged, their structures merely mellowed by the years. Aside from dress and radio, the people are the same as those we might have met a century ago, and time is only something to measure seasons by. JOHN C. ROGERS.

President's Victory

By Ernest K. Lindley

Court Conversion

THE PRESIDENT'S boast that he has at last attained all seven of the objectives of his celebrated judicial reorganization plan of February, 1937, has evoked caustic replies from politicians and journals which fought that plan. With one exception, all the replies I have seen acknowledge that the President's boast is correct. The exception is Senator Burke, of Nebraska, who clings to a rather nightmarish version of the President's purposes—a version which was widely exploited at the time but has now been laid to rest by most of the President's critics.

Of course, all other six objectives were subsidiary to the conversion of the Supreme Court from a body dominated by an immovable ironclad conservatism to the liberal and flexible views of the more distinguished minority of the old court: Associate Justices Brandeis and Stone and the late Associate Justice Cardozo.

Those who fought the President's court plan acknowledge that the court is now dominated by such a liberal, flexible viewpoint. The prevailing current retort to the President's boast is only that this change was brought about by the filling of vacancies caused in the traditional ways, by death or retirement.

New Deal Faced Court Stone Wall

THAT IS TRUE, of course. On the whole, it is better that the change should have come about in this way. But to say that and nothing more is to ignore the situation that confronted the President and, through him, a great majority of the American electorate in February, 1937.

The President knew when he took office in March, 1933, that he would run into a stone wall if the Supreme Court stood by its decisions of recent years. He knew that the court, as it then stood, would have to begin reversing itself, or that there would have to be a change in its membership to create a liberal majority. For four years he gambled that one or the other would happen. The court at first moved gingerly to the liberal side, then plumped back into its old ways—by 5-4 and 6-3 decisions. The aging reactionary justices clung to their seats—although it had been rather generally understood that at least two of them were near the point of retirement when Roosevelt was inaugurated.

During his first Administration, Roosevelt gambled and lost. A large part of the New Deal was not only knocked out, but knocked out in terms which forbade its revival. If the elections of 1932 and 1936 meant anything, there had to be a showdown on the rights of the legislative branch and executive branch to govern the country within the limits held to be entirely constitutional by the minority of the court—distinguished men all and generally recognized in the legal profession as superior in learning and ability to most of the majority members.

Broad Interpretation Of Constitution Needed

ROOSEVELT'S decision to try to change the balance of the court by enlarging it was, admittedly, a measure of desperation, adopted after four years of frustration. It seemed to him to be the least objectionable way out to break through an impasse that had to be broken.

Two other vital points are overlooked in the retorts I have seen to the President's statement of last Monday. The first is that the President has been proved 100 per cent right in his major contention: that the trouble was not with the Constitution but with the Supreme Court's interpretation of it.

Two years ago most of his critics were saying that if change was wanted the proper course was to amend the Constitution. Some held this view honestly; others undoubtedly advanced it only as a debating point or because they knew that amendment was difficult. The President insisted that amendment was superfluous: that the kind of change he and other liberals had in mind could come only through justices who gave to the great general clauses of the Constitution, especially the commerce and general welfare and due process clauses, a broad meaning. It has now been shown that amendment was wholly unnecessary.

Pursued Enemy He Had Defeated

THE SECOND POINT which his critics overlook is that the change of mind by the Supreme Court came before, not after, any vacancies occurred.

The court began reversing itself in the spring of 1937, after the President had put forth his reorganization plan. No one can say how much the justices were influenced by this threat and how much by the 1936 election. But the record shows that they gave way, and gave way rapidly. This trend has been extended and consolidated by the President's subsequent appointments to the court.

But when the Supreme Court adjourned in June, 1937, it had already given the President the substance which he sought. As a bonus there was one vacancy, created by the retirement of Justice Van Devanter. The great error in the President's tactics, in my opinion, is that he was more than two years too late in proclaiming his victory. He could have done it, in all truth and with all honor, in June, 1937, and saved himself the heavy political costs of pursuing an enemy he had already defeated.

Text of Roosevelt's Letter

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 10.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's message to Pitt Tyson Maner, president of the Young Democrats of America, and read to the Young Democrats' convention:

Please convey my greetings to the convention.

Never was there a more timely gathering than that of you Young Democrats at Pittsburgh. Recent events have demonstrated the necessity of a restatement and a reaffirmation of Democratic principles, and no group can undertake this mission as well as the young men and young women of our party.

From the beginning, Democracy has meant progress and its battle ever since Jeffer... has been a steady conflict with the forces of reaction and special favors. Every time the policies involving greater opportunities for the common man have triumphed, our political enemies have sought to minimize those policies and to neutralize the decisions of the people. Today is no exception to that classical course of events.

Uniformly the party of Nicholas Biddle of Jackson's time, of Quay and Hanna of the Cleveland era, and of the Theodore Roosevelt period, has bowed to the progressive wing to the extent of pretending accord with the objectives of the progressive administrations, but has found fault with the methods requsite for putitgn and keeping these principles at work. Uniformly have they appealed to such elements in our own party as dreaded the departure from ancient habits or were responsive to the powerful agencies that financed and controlled local politics. Probably the boar... story of corruption in American elections is the histo... of those moneyed magnates who contributed vastly to the campaigns of candidates of both parties with the idea that they could continue control regardless of the way which the political cat jumped.

Just as there are progressives in the Republican ranks, so there are reactionaries in our own party. Political affiliation is often the child of hereditary principles, begotten in the first instance of issues of terrific importance in the beginning, but which have no more significance at present than the inflamed controversy of a century and a half ago as to whether the Capital of the United States should be at Washington or somewhere on the Susquehanna River.

Always has it been the aim of the enemies of liberalism to seek to attach to themselves such members of our party. Sometimes they have succeeded; sometimes they have failed.

When they have succeeded they have not infrequently been successful in their efforts to supplant a Democratic Administration with a Republican Administration. Such happenings, though they have brought dismay for a period, have not sufficed to stop the general and inevitable movement to make our country a better country for all of us rather than to make it a lush pasture for the seekers and holders of privilege.

Every Democratic Administration has left a progressive mark on our own history and has influenced world progress as well. But when it has been succeeded by a typically Republican Administration, progress has slipped backwards—sometimes a few feet and often many miles. It has been said that a great many voters today want us as a Nation to stop, look and listen. What they fail to understand is that nations cannot stand still because by the very act of standing still, the rest of the procession, moving forward, inevitably leaves them in the rear. Therefore, their desire to stand still actually means moving backward in relation to the rest of the world.

Republican and Democratic reactionaries want to undo what we have accomplished in these last few years and return to the unrestricted individualism of the previous century. Republican and Democratic conservatives admit that all of our recent policies are not wrong and that many of them should be retained—but their eyes are on the present; they give no thought for the future and thus, without meaning to, are failing to solve even current social and economic problems by declining to consider the needs of tomorrow. Radicals of all kinds have some use to humanity because they have at least the imagination to think up many kinds of answers to problems even though their answers are wholly impracticable of fulfillment in the immediate future.

Liberals, on the other hand, are those who, unlike the radicals who want to tear up everything by the roots and plant new and untried seeds, desire to use the existing plants of civilizations, to select the best of them, to water them and make them grow—not only for the present use of mankind, but also for the use of generations to come. That is why I call myself a Liberal, and that is why, even if we go by the modern contraption of polls of public opinion, an over-whelming majority of younger men and women throughout the United States are on the Liberal side of things.

In considering the present and the future of American politics or policies, you have the right and the duty to say to those who want to stand still—"Have you no program other than standing still? We are not satisfied if you tell us glibly that you believe in taking care of old people, that you want the young people to have jobs, that you want everybody to have a job, that you believe in a fairer distribution of wealth—we insist in addition that you give us specifications of how you would do it if you were in power."

Do not let the reactionaries and the conservatives get away with fine phrases. Pin them down and make them tell you just how they would do it.

The Democratic party will fail if it goes conservative next year, or if it is led by people who can offer naught but fine phrases.

Last winter, in speaking at the Jackson Day dinner, I referred to the sad state the country would be in if it had to choose between a Democratic tweedle dum and a Republican tweedle dee. I want to amend that simile, so let me put it this way: The Democratic party will not survive as an effective force in the nation if the voters have to choose between a Republican tweedle dum and a Democratic tweedle dummer.

If we nominate conservative candidates, or lip-service candidates, on a straddlebug platform, I personally, for my own self respect and because of my long service to, and belief in, liberal democracy, will find it imposible to have any active part in such an unfortunate suicide of the old Democratic party.

I do not anticipate that any such event will take place, for I believe that the convention will see the political wisdom, as well as the national wisdom, of giving to the voters of the United States an opportunity to maintain the practice and the policy of moving forward with a liberal and humanitarian program. A large part of the responsibility for such a choice of fundamental policies lies in the hands and in the heads of the younger men and women of the Nation. Be vigilant to keep Tories from controlling your own ranks—just as vigilant as you will be to keep Tory Republicans from controlling your own Nation.

We who have borne the heat and burden of the day salute you—you who are about to live!

Very sincerely yours,

Fair Enough

Att'n, Labor Board

I WOULD LIKE to call the attention of the Labor Board, the Civil Liberties Union and the Communistic unioneers who infest the American labor movement to a flagrant violation of political and religious freedom by an employer. This employer discriminates against Americans on political and religious grounds, excluding from employment all persons who are not members of a certain political party. He also requires that those who do qualify under these coercive conditions contribute a portion of their earnings to the party funds.

This latter result is accomplished by an indirect and evasive method. The catch being the employes cannot belong to the party unless they contribute and can't get or keep jobs if they don't belong to the party. That is a mere dodge, however, and I am sure that the Labor Relations Board would give the employer a most violent tossing around and probably send someone to prison if the employer were Republic Steel and the party were the Republican Party.

Communist Party Restricts Employes

BUT THE EMPLOYER is a Communist publication, and the party to which the employes must belong and contribute is the Communist Party, and that seems to make the difference, although I don't see why it should or why a Communist publication has any more right to police the politics of its employes than William Randolph Hearst, who doesn't.

For contrast, let us assume that Mr. Tom Girdler, the well-known horrible example, has decreed that all of his employes must join the Republican Party and contribute a portion of their pay, on a graduated, income tax basis, to the party's chest. He also requires that they attend all party meetings, take a personal part in all party demonstrations and refrain from writing or uttering remarks derogatory to the party's leader or contrary to the Republican platform or line. For violation of any of these requirements they may be dismissed from the party and consequently from their jobs.

A Few Parallels In Other Lines

TO REMAIN PARALLEL to the case of the Communist publication we must assume also that the Republican Party has a corps of spies spotted around to report conversational deviations from the platform or line, and that the expression of a belief in God is not merely a deviation but rank heresy, punishable by dismissal from the party and from the job.

We assume that for the purpose of evasion Mr. Girdler takes on, provisionally, an occasional employe who is not an openly avowed member but a Republican fellow traveler or promising probationer. But he selects such individuals with great care, lest, somehow, a Democrat, Communist or New Dealer slip into his industrial household. The presence of these few individuals enables him to say, with a faint color of truth but without its substance, as anyone can see, that party membership is not 100 per cent compulsory.

So there is a great explosion against Mr. Girdler, who, to observe the parallel further, sets up two defenses. First, he says he doesn't police the politics of his employes or demand that they scorn God. He says it just happens that most of them feel that way about politics and adds that, anyway, his fellow travelers and probationary Republicans are living disproof. That defense is tossed out right away, however, as a dirty Republican subterfuge. Mr. Girdler then says, if it comes to that, he has a right to do as he is alleged to have done because he wants a harmonious plant in which everybody holds the same beliefs and all, therefore, work agreeably together.

There's No Blast Against Red Paper

TO THIS the examiner replies that employes are free men and women with human rights, including that of conscience, and don't have to harmonize. All they have to do is a certain minimum of work for established rates of pay. They can wear party buttons of groups opposed to the Republican Party, denounce Landon, Hoover and Hamilton if they want to, and go to church every night in the week and all day Sunday. The examiner gives him a terrible going-over and, I think, gets him put away in jail, and it is agreed that it serves Mr. Girdler damn well right, because who does he think he is?

But that is carrying the parallel a couple of steps too far.

There is no explosion against the Communist publication, nobody is cited or prosecuted, and a man or woman still must belong and contribute to the Communist Party and repudiate God to get a job in the first place and keep it thereafter.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

The Spending-Lending Program

THE DEFEAT of the Administration on the spending-lending program was above everything else the rejection of a theory.

This Congress has not made retrenchments, nor taken steps to bring the budget into balance. On the contrary, the budget for the current fiscal year is the largest yet, and the prospective deficit imposing.

But the Congress, by throwing out the whole program, indicated—apart from the fact that it was hot and weary—that it no longer had faith that by spending and lending we shall automatically rehabilitate the economic order. It further rejected the idea that the loan of a Government corporation guaranteed by the Government was not an addition to the national debt. It indicated—on the basis of the record so far—its skepticism about "self-liquidating" debts. For too many of the Government's loans have been bad loans and uncollectible, and a bad debt is a deficit, as even the income-tax authorities admit to the taxpayers.

New Priming Theory Was Radical Idea

MORE IMPORTANTLY, the Congress shied away from the most questionable pump-priming theory which this Administration of fertile imagination has yet devised. The theory embodied in the Government's bills was first aired before the National Retailers. It was presented as an already familiar model, but it was actually a radical innovation. It was a program of Government borrowing and investing not for the purpose of compensating for inadequate private investment and thus keeping the economy on keel but to attain certain levels of national income, with any prospect of a balanced budget left indeterminate.

Again, the probable effect upon the total economy was left unconsidered. That such a program was certain to encroach progressively upon private business and divert the savings and economy into governmental debt, masked as the investment operations of specially created Government instruments, was implicit in the bill.

Like so many New Deal measures, it conceived of the Government's activities—this time in the field of credit expansionas though they were being carried out in a world where no other economy existed that could be stimulated or retarded or thrown completely out of gear by what the Government does. But in our economy the Government itself lives on the private economy, and not vice versa.

These proposed Government adventures were also to be singularly free from accounting control.

Haphazard Method Of Enlarging Trade

THE POSSSIBILITY existed that thus the Government would sally forth to enlarge the areas of socialization of business and banking, and to enlarge them in a haphazard and chaotic way.

The pump-priming theoroy had gone through a remarkable evolution, until it got slapped at last by this disgruntled Congress.

It started as an emergency measure, at a time when almost any sort of stimulant, from digitalis to brandy, was useful. The brandy was actually forthcoming in the repeal of prohibition, and it helped.

In 1932 the patient was passing out, and there was not time to make a thorough diagnosis of all the factors responsible for his collapse. There are still people who think that if we had left the patient alone he would have come around all right by himself, but they are the people who think that economic laissez faire is ordained in nature—as some Vermonters think that Eastern standard time is God's time.

Most people, however, thought that if some stimulant were not given, there would never be a diagnosis. Instead there would be an autopsy. The first New Deal arrived in the role of an ambulance surgeon.

Varied Diagnoses Fail To Aid Patient

BUT SINCE the patient first opened his eyes and began to move his hands and give signs of life, we have had a series of doctors giving conflicting diagnoses and administering various remedies.

The most consistent of the doctors are students of old Prof. Marx, and there are one or two of them in every consultation.

They never even look at the patient, because in their simplified science all social orders but one suffer from the same disease; the patient is going to die anyway, and the most merciful therapy is to hasten the end. This procedure they call "accepting history." It consists of being sure of the inevitable as laid down in the books, and stimulating and welcoming every sign of disintegration.

Their presence in any consulting room makes the patient abnormally nervous and has been known at times to make him maniac. Then the counter-treatment is to put him into a straitjacket.

From time to time the New Deal doctors have split fees with high-powered specialists; once they passed the buck to a clinic from the NRA. But since the original stimulus brought the patient around in the first place, they have always gone back to the original remedy.

Too Many "Cures" May Prove Fatal

THEY SEEM UNAWARE that although the least modicum of some remedy may be good, more of the same thing may be fatal, codliver oil, taken in moderation, hardens the bones, its concentrated essence, too copiously administered, also hardens the arteries. Every medicine can produce its own peculiar disease, and we are suffering now from the complications imposed by the doctors on the original disease which has not yet been adequately diagnosed, and never consistently treated.

The action of the Congress in throwing out the spending-lending bill is the action of guardians throwing out the latest crowd of specialists, still without being satisfied with the condition of the patient, or indicating that they know what to do for him or whom to call in next.

They have devised by themselves, a set of homemade antidotes, but they are antidotes for the doctor's antidotes—not antidotes for the basic ailments.

The Hatch bill is an antidote for the WPA, and the Logan bill is an antidote for the disorders of the administrative agencies, and the vote to investigate the NLRB is a gesture made in the vague hope of finding an antidote for the chaos in labor-employer relations.

Amendment Merely Ties Doctor's Hands

THE REJECTION of the proposed amendment to the neutrality bill provides no antidote for anything. It merely ties the doctor's hands while it keeps him on the case.

Common sense, which is the rule of thumb established by experience, says that a consistent diet of pork is dangerous even for the healthy. This Congress has diminished the pork barrel of the Executive. It has not put a cover on the pork barrel of the legislative department, however—for that is its own pork barrel.

In a legislative pork barrel everybody gets into the trough according to a kind of Gallup Poll, and the pork being more generally distributed perhaps does less harm, although it costs just as much on the budget.

Executive pork is more dangerous, for it is distributed to specific economic or ideological interests. The real fight in this Congress has been between the paying pork barrel and the ideological pork barrel—except for the farmers. They are there no matter which address is dealing it out.

There seems to be a growing demand for the return of the confidence practitioners—the disciples of Dr. Coue. Because this school of thought was represented at the bedside a long time ago, it may be forgotten that the rhythmic chant of "every day in every way we are getting better and better" immediately preceded the first collapse.

'Invaders' Marshal Their Forces at Fort Belvoir for Manassas Drive

Associated Press Photos.

E. Rockville Hits Proposal to Raze Overpass

Residents Say B.& O. Span Removal Would Mean Long Detour

Residents of East Rockville yesterday protested against the proposed dismantling of the old B. & O. Railroad overpass in the southern end of town.

The protest was made at a conference in the courthouse between officials of the State roads commission, the B. & O. Railroad Co., county commissioners and town authorities.

Dr. George L. Edmonds, postmaster and head of the East Rockville delegation, declared that removal of the overpass would cause residents of East Rockville considerable inconvenience and would result in lowering the property values in this section of the town.

Following the conference, an official inspection of the overpass was made. The railroad company, which owns the span, has signified its intention of letting it be torn down in view of the fact that a new overpass on Viers Mill road has been completed.

Protests Detour

Dr. Edmonds said the new overpass would not meet the needs of the 250 East Rockville families because it was too far distant from the community. He said it would mean a 3-mile detour to the center of town.

The new overpass was constructed following the tragic school bus accident in which 14 pupils were killed in April, 1935.

Besides Maj. Whitman, others who attended the conference included Nathan Smith, chief engineer of the roads commission; Richard Mathers, of the B. & O. Railroad Co.; Robert Rhinedollar, bridge engineer of the roads commission; J. W. Jones, of the B. & O. and Edgar R. Reed, representing the Rockville Mayor and town council.

'Green' Apple Army Routs 'Blues' in Manassas Raid

Casualties at the mimic battle of Manassas continued to rise yesterday as green apples, appendicitis and colds reaped their toll among the armies.

Walter Reed and Fort Myer hospitals received the disabled National Guardsmen after they were carried from the bloodless battlefield. Two cases at Walter Reed were diagnosed as acute appendicitis. Four men rushed to Fort Myer suffered colds and stomach cramps from green apples. One veteran had a bruised rib.

Yesterday's casualties brought the total to about 40, a figure considerably below the number anticipated, according to hospital attaches. One officer explained the cases as "the usual things which come from the concentration of a large group."

Fairfax Tightens Aid to Indigent Parents of County

The Board of Public Welfare of Fairfax County, Va., has voted to be more drastic in its interpretation of the Virginia law governing the support of indigent parents by children who are able to work.

There were 218 homes given assistance, 56 service cases, 100 old-age assistance, aid to the blind, 3; to dependent children, 10, and general relief, 92.

The report showed $2,425.05 was expended in the month for public assistance. Of this $1,360.70 was for old age assistance, $41 to the blind, $262 to dependent children, and $761.35 for general relief.

Va. Road Marts Annually Take In $500,000

Vegetable and Fruit Venders Increasing On Every Highway

By the Associated Press

Blacksburg, Va., Aug. 10.—Roadside markets for fruits and vegetables are doing an estimated half million dollar a year business in Virginia, says the Extension Division News, and such markets are increasing in numbers on every hard surfaced road in the State.

This estimate is based on 2 per cent of the 1935 cash income from vegetables of $10,471,000 and from fruits of $13,120,000.

Operators say their marketing costs are less and that part-time employment is furnished to members of the family through such roadside operations.

The increase in the number of roadside markets since 1930 is attributed to the disparity between farm and retail prices, the inability of many small producers to market their produce through usual channels at reasonable costs, and the improvement of highways, bringing thousands of consumers past the producer's door.

To farmers inquiring what factors contribute to a successful roadside market, agricultural authorities issue a warning that relatively few farmers are located where they can market all their fruits and vegetables economically at a roadside stand.

In a few instances certain operators found it paid to handle non-farm products such as candy, ice-cream and soft drinks. Most operators found it profitable to purchase farm produce, graded to U. S. standards, from their neighbors to increase their variety and lengthen the marketing season.

Considerable care must be exercised to keep a uniform display of high quality, fresh produce, the extension division said. Principal factors affecting volume of sales included traffic count, period stand was open for business, regularity of opening and closing, lights, type and general appearance of stand, size and appearance of display, method of pricing, use of price tags, number of repeat customers and other factors.

The approximate number of vehicles using a hard surfaced road in Virginia in a 12-hour daylight period in any summer or fall month can be obtained from the State Highway Department. Such a traffic count will indicate to a farmer the number of prospective customers who might pass a roadside stand if he built it.

Gov. Price Urged To Reduce Abdell Sentence to Life

Richmond, Aug. 10 (AP).—Counsel for J. C. Abdell, of Norfolk, who is under death sentence for the killing of his wife, told Gov. Price today that if the sentence were reduced to life imprisonment, "there is a chance he will be completely exonerated."

The Governor, after a two-hour hearing, said he intended to "explore every avenue of the case," and if more time were necessary to permit a thorough study of the information before him, he would have no hesitancy in granting a new reprieve.

Offering an affidavit of Miss Janyce Mattox, a neighbor of the Abdells, and a letter from Mrs. Lois M. Dorman, mailed the day before she died last April, in which the women said they saw Mrs. Abdell alive some hours after the time fixed as that when Abdel left his home, attorneys for the condemned man argued that beyond peradventure, Abdell could not have killed his wife.

A. H. Wood Rites To Be in California

Funeral rites for Alph Hamilton Wood, 84, father of Dr. Lynn H. Wood, member of the faculty of the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary, Takoma Park, Md., who died Tuesday in Hollywood, Calif., will be held in Hollywood today. Burial will be in Glendale, Calif.

Born in Monroe, Wis., Mr. Wood was the first classical graduate of Battle Creek College, Battle Creek, Mich.

Surviving Mr. Wood is another son, Dr. Neal Wood, of Chicago, and a sister, Mrs. Chloe Wood Miller, of Takoma Park.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0909.

Clifton G. Stoneburner, executive director of the Arlington County Safety Council, said plans are under way for a conference with William D. Medley, delegate to the General Assembly from Arlington, to discuss the question of speed on Lee boulevard between Glebe road and Arlington Ridge road.

Should it be found that new legislation is not necessary, Stoneburner said it is planned to have a committee go to Richmond with Medley to urge a reduction in the speed limit on the boulevard. If this can not be done under existing laws, the council will urge the passage of a bill at the next session of the General Assembly to reduce the speed from 55 miles an hour to at least 35 miles.

Stoneburner said that with the increased number of homes being built along that section of the boulevard, and the number of intersections, 55 miles an hour is entirely too great a speed to be allowed.

Gov. Price to See Pageant

Arlington—With the opening of "The Birth of the Flag," an historical pageant on Monday night to continue through the entire week at the Arlington Youth Center, J. Byron Brooks, program chairman, announced a special feature for each night before the pageant.

One feature of the schedule is the visit by Gov. James H. Price Friday, which has been set aside as "Governor's Day."

Other events include "United States Day," Monday; "District of Columbia Day," Tuesday; "Veterans Day," Wednesday; "Youth Day," Thursday, and "Virginia Day," Saturday.

The opening performance Monday night will be preceded by a procession of pageant queens through the county, headed by Mildred Bolen, "Queen of the Flag," who will be crowned by Senator Harry Flood Byrd.

Members of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will visit the Youth Center Tuesday to crown Miss Helen O'Day, representing the Capital as "Miss District of Columbia." Miss O'Day will be crowned by Commissioner Melvin Hazen.

Joint Feld Day

Arlington.—There will be a joint field day by groups attending the playgrounds at Clarendon and Patrick Henry Schools today on the grounds of Patrick Henry School on South Fillmore street. Events will begin at noon under direction of Harry Deming.

This meet, as explained by W. A. Richardson, director of playgrounds in Arlington County, is to prepare for the county field meet to be staged on the grounds at Washington Lee High School August 29.

Home Damaged By Fire

Arlington.—Fire discovered on the second floor of her home by Mrs. E. E. VanMeter, of 3406 Lee boulevard, was soon under control after the arrival of firemen from the Clarendon and Ballston department yesterday morning. County Fire Chief A. C. Scheffel reported the damage to be about $200.

Route 151, Nelson County at Afton, bridge over the C. & O. Railroad, Ralph E. Mills Co., Roanoke, $14,598.70.

George W. Koiner, 87, Dies; State Farm Head for 40 Years

High Officials Mourn Veteran's Death; Rites Today

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Aug. 10.—George W. Koiner, oldest State commissioner of agriculture in point of service in the United States and the oldest department head in Virginia, died in a hospital here today in his eighty-eighth year.

Death came as he was attempting to regain strength after undergoing an operation three weeks ago. He had been in failing health for several years. But he continued to go to his office up until a few weeks ago.

He had served as commissioner of agriculture and immigration continuously since his appointment by Governor J. Hoge Tyler in December, 1899.

Rites Set Today

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. at Grace-Covenant Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member, with burial in historic Hollywood Cemetery.

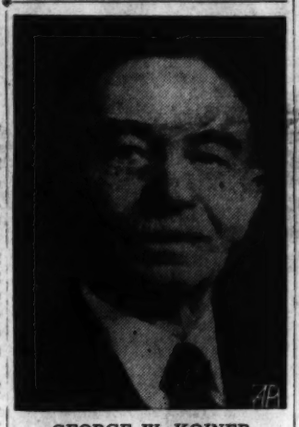
Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. C. C. Vaughan of Richmond, and Mrs. Ewen Davidson of Alexandria, and one son, Arthur W. Koiner, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

The veteran administrator's death brought expressions of regret and appreciation for his long service from high officials in public life of the State.

N. B. Early, jr., United States collector of internal revenue for Virginia, who had been a close friend of the commissioner during his 40 years with the Department of Agriculture, said he was "very much shocked to hear of his death. Farmers of the Commonwealth," he said, "appreciate his splendid work."

Native of Augusta

Born on an Augusta County farm September 2, 1852, Koiner attended



GEORGE W. KOINER

Roanoke College where he obtained the M. A. and D. SC. degrees. From college, he returned to Augusta to operate a large farm for a number of years.

He was a member of the House of Delegates for several terms and while serving as a legislator engineered passage of a number of laws pertaining to agriculture, including prohibitions against the adulteration of fertilizer.

His department was greatly expanded during the years he directed its activities. From a fertilizer bureau, it grew into a department with separate divisions of chemistry, botany and seed testing, nursery crop inspection, dairy and food regulation, livestock sanitation, statistics and marketing.

His efforts toward developing agriculture and marketing and protecting farmers from spurious products won him the name of "the farmers' friend." Gov. Price reappointed him shortly after his inauguration in 1938.

Marriage Law In Force Today In Alexandria

Health Certificate Requirement Will Affect All Applicants

The new city ordinance requiring health certificates from all applicants for marriage licenses in Alexandria will affect out of State applicants as well as Virginia residents, City Manager Carl Budwesky said yesterday, as city officials prepared to bring the law into effect for the first time today.

Every applicant, he said, will be required to present a certificate from a recognized physician, showing him to be free from contagious diseases, or incapable of communicating such diseases to other persons.

Under provisions of the ordinance, designed principally to curb the spread of veneral diseases, all ministers and other persons licensed to perform marriage ceremonies in the city must also require applicants to present similar certificates. Any violation will be classed as a misdemeanor, carrying a penalty to include a jail sentence not to exceed 60 days, and a fine not to exceeding $100.

The ordinance becomes effective today despite an adverse opinion by Virginia Attorney General A. P. Staples, who said he doubted the validity of the measure on the grounds that the issuance of marriage licenses is a State function, and no State law exists under which applicants are required to present health certificates.

In addition to requiring health certificates the new ordinance provides that physicians who treat persons for contagious diseases must submit written reports to the city health officer on each case. It also authorizes the health officer to quarantine all persons known to be suffering from venereal diseases.

Holy Name Session Planned

Preliminary plans for the annual convention here of the Holy Name Societies of Virginia next month, were outlined last night when members of the local committee met with the Rev. T. E. O'Connell, spiritual director for the State association, preceding the regular meeting of the Holy Name unit of St. Mary's Catholic Church. A tentative program for the one-day session was approved by the director.

The convention will be led by Frank H. Nowland, diocesan president, while Clarence Dyson, president of the local unit, heads the committee on arrangements.

More than 200 Virginia members, as well as several groups from West Virginia, are expected to attend the session.

School Bids Submitted

Five bids, four from Alexandria contractors, were submitted to City Manager Budwesky yesterday for installation of a heating plant at the Lee Elementary School. The contract will be let today following a conference between Bedwesky and City Engineer H. G. McCartney.

Walter Mitchell, of Alexandria, submitted the lowest bid—$5,470. Others were B. Rowe, Alexandria, $5,875; H. H. Watkins, Alexandria, $5,995; Thomas Peyton, Alexandria, $6,972, and National Heating Co., Washington, $6,985.

Although city council has not yet appropriated funds for the project, the city manager has been authorized to award the contract immediately and the sum will be appropriated at the next council session. The contract will provide that the project be completed before the opening of school, around September 15.

In-Law Friction Decried in 4-H Talk at U. Md.

Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren, deplored the economic situation which makes it necessary for young married couples to live with their parents in an address before 4-H Club members at the University of Maryland yesterday.

"A recent survey by the American Youth Foundation," Dr. Bowman said, "showed that 40 per cent of the young couples married in Maryland during the last five years are living with their parents, and 90 per cent of those appearing in divorce courts of the State in that period traced their troubles directly to friction between parents and themselves."

Dr. Brown emphasized the importance of religion in promoting marriage stability.

William Shoemaker, of Allegany County, was elected president of the State Council of 4-H Clubs for Maryland. Raymond Mueller, of Talbot County, was chosen vice president, and Elizabeth Cissel Kuhns, of Howard County, secretary-treasurer.

A style revue, in which both boys and girls will participate, will be held at 7:30 tonight in the university auditorium.

Albemarle Home Sold; Ex-Haunt Of 'Moon Ghost'

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 10.—Church Hill, one of the oldest homes in Albemarle, located near Keene, not far from Scottsville, part of a 1,000-acre estate on the lower Hardware River purchased in 1760 by William Moon, has been sold to Julian L. Hagan, prominent attorney of New York City, it was announced today.

The small house is noted as the scene of the famous "Moon Ghost," which, just after the Civil War, terrorized the family of Schuyler B. Moon. Lights flashing in darkened rooms, furniture heaped in disorder by invisible hands, stones and shots from no traceable agency, caused an excitement which became nationwide. Relays of students from the University of Virginia stood guard for several months, but the disturbance was never accounted for.

New Bank Chartered At Charles Town

Charles Town, W. Va., Aug. 10.—A new charter has been issues to Farmers Bank of Shepherdstown which will permit it to remove its place of business to Charles Town, change the amount of its capital stock and change its name.

The change in name from "Farmers Bank of Shepherdstown" to "Peoples Bank of Charles Town" is authorized. The changes in the charter were voted by stockholders of the Shepherdstown bank there at a special meeting.

Colvin Run Sets Tournament For Sept. 2

Professional and Amateur Horsemen Will Compete

The Colvin Run Citizens Association last night decided to hold its annual tournament Saturday, September 2, starting at 2 p. m. The tournament for both professional and amateur riders will be followed by a chicken supper from 5 to 9 p. m., and dancing in the evening in the Community Hall. No horse show will be staged this year.

Joseph Wheeler, past president of the association, was named general manager of the tournament, with Mrs. Henry Hirst, of McLean, as secretary; Mrs. Elsie Reed, of McLean, treasurer; Misses Annabel Knauss and Marjorie Sakes, marshals, and Henry Hirst and A. Schwartz, judges. Prizes will be $15, $10, $5 and $2.50 for professionals and the same for amateurs. The Queen of Love and Beauty and her maids of honor, to be selected by the tournament winners, will be crowned in the hall at 9 p. m.

The chicken supper was placed in charge of Mrs. L. R. Smith, Mrs. Carl Dailey, Mrs. Eva Alexander, and Mrs. Wilson Rowe. The dance committee consists of Charles Roller, Jim Coulter and James Vance. The games will be managed by Carl Shifflett and L. R. Smith.

The new officers of the association who took charge last night are L. B. Morris, president; L. R. Smith, vice president; Mrs. Joseph Wheeler, secretary; Mrs. Will Oliver, treasurer. Additional members of the board of directors include Joseph Wheeler, Charles Roller, Embrey Wheeler, Lewis Rodier and A. Wickens.

Herd Tester Makes Report

The July report of Fairfax County Dairy Herd Improvement Association No. 2 shows that dairy herds affiliated with the association produced an average of 643 pounds of milk and 25.1 pounds of butterfat. The three high ranking herds belong to B. F. Salsbury, D. O. Hileman and T. M. Pell.

A grade Holstein in the herd owned by Pell led in individual production with a record of 1,506 pounds of milk and 69.2 pounds of butterfat. Second honors also went to a grade Holstein in the Pell herd, while a cow of similar breed in the Hileman herd, ranked third. The tests were made by W. G. Merritt, official tester.

Gunnell Post to Install

Dyer Gunnell Post No. 180, American Legion, of Vienna, Va., has elected G. Warren Beard as its new commander. Other officers to be installed tonight by District Commander Raymond King, of Alexandria, are Lewis Rodier, first vice commander; Burton Satterfield, second vice commander; Robert E. Neillan, adjutant; Carlton Yax, finance officer; A. Lawrence Leigh, historian; Frank D. Dismuke, sergeant at arms; Lloyd E. Wright, chaplain, and Thomas R. Moreland, publicity officer.

Gas Company Offers 5-Cent Reduction

Plan for Monthly Cut To Average User Is Presented to P. U. C.

A reduction of 5 cents in the monthly gas bill to average domestic consumers was offered yesterday by officials of the Washington Gas Light Co. in the annual hearing on the adjustment of rates based on the sliding scale arangement.

Under this plan, the company offers one-half the amount of excess earnings over and above a 6½ per cent rate of return, for use in reducing rates to consumers.

Meantime, Craig S. Vincent, first vice president of the Washington Industrial Union Council, petitioned the Public Utilities Commission, which conducted the hearing, to reduce the rate of return from the present amount to 6 per cent.

Reduction Explained

E. J. Boothby, vice president and business manager of the compnay, said the company had $96,300 for rate reduction, $62,700 of which would be allocated to domestic consumers. He said the rates per cubic foot would remain the same, but the amount of consumption necessary to attain "blocks" in which the price is lower would be reduced.

B. M. Bachman, chief accountant for the commission, produced figures which showed the company had $163,574 for rate reductions. A statement submitted by Robert C. Owers, treasurer for the company, revealed $95,341 was available for rate reductions. It developed that the difference between the commission and company figures centered around the handling of an item for $134,223, representing a reduction in income taxes claimed by the company during the last year due to loses suffered in bond refunding.

Amortization Asked

Under the terms of the sliding scale arrangement a proviso states "unusual items" may be amortized over a five-year period thus preventing an abnormal reduction in rates in any one year. E. Barrett Prettyman, attorney for the company, and Owers argued the $134,223 amount should be amortized over a five-year period to prevent an abnormal reduction this year and probably an increase in rates next year.

Valuation of the company properties by both the commission and company accounts was $24,120,000. Under the proposed new schedule of rates, which would go into effect on September 1, the company offered a reduction of $31,900 to commercial and industrial consumers. The rates to wholesale apartment house consumer would be reduced by some $1,700 under Boothby's plan.

Charles J. Curtis

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 10.—Funeral services were held this afternoon for Charles J. Curtis, 77, who died at his home Tuesday night after a long illness.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillie Embrey Curtis; a daughter, Mrs. Jeanette G. Burgess; three sons, Louis A. Curtis, Fredericksburg; Charles W. Curtis, Arlington; William E. Curtis, Erie, Pa., and one brother, Thomas Curtis, of Morrisville.

'Smoke of Battle' Rises Again Over Bull Run Battlefield

Recovery Still Up to Congress, CoonleyAsserts

Manufacturers' Chief Refuses Blame Till New Deal Is 'Corrected'

Howard Coonley, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, declared last night that business could not assume the responsibility for recovery until New Deal governmental innovations had been "abandoned or adjusted to experience."

"Nearly ten years of continuous depression," he said, "should make it crystal clear to politicians and public alike that recovery awaits the correction of things done wrong."

This observation was made in a letter to the association's 7,600 members, in which Coonley said business should be encouraged by the conservative trend in Congress. Recovery, however, he declared, awaits further positive actoin at the next session, such as amendment of the Wagner labor act.

Opinions Invited

Other developments bearing on the business situation were:

The House Ways and Means subcommittee on taxation invited businessmen to submit in writing their views as to the changes that should be made in the Federal tax laws.

John M. Carmody, Federal Works Administrator, disclosed plans to furnish suppliers of building materials advance information as to Government needs to help them plan production schedules.

Coonley declared "considerable overemphasis is placed on the claim that Congress has accepted industry's challenge and that responsibility for complete recovery has been shifted to business." Congress, he said, has merely achieved a psychological effect by slowing down "some of the unsound trends which have penetrated our national thinking."

Accepts Criticism

The coming Congressional investigation of the National Labor Relations Board, he said, is important, but does not "remove the drawbacks to employment involved in the defects in the Wagner act."

Coonley took cognizance of criticism by President Roosevelt and other New Dealers that businessmen often seek to obtain Government-financed projects in their areas while urging greater Federal economy.

"Businessmen," he said, "should practice what they preach on the subject of Government spending . . . When we ask for thrift at the front door, we should not be guilty of petitioning Congress at the back door for expenditures in our State, city or district."

Answer to Martin

His letter was regarded as an answer to Representative Martin, Massachusetts House minority leader, who a few days ago cited benefits to business from the last sesion and aid further gains reted with buiness.

The Ways and Means sub-committee's invitation to businessmen iis i nline with a policy, agreed upon at recent secret meetings, of trying to run down all clews as to what is wrong with Federal tax laws.

The sub-committee has voted itself a vacation until November 1. At that time, it intends to start private hearings for the purpose of drafting a tax bill for consideration when Congress meets again in JJanuary.

During the interim, experts of the Treasury and the Joint Committe eon Internal Revenue Taxation will compile a huge volume of data on questions which it has instructed them to study.

Rites for C. L. Reed Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for Charles L. Reed, 46, assistant to the president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who died Wednesday at Pittsburgh, will be held tomorrow at his former home in Salem, Mass.

Mr. Reed, who had served with the brotherhood headquarters here for the last ten years, was formerly an official of the Massachusetts State Electrical Workers Association and business manager of the brotherhood local in Salem, Mass.

Surviving are his sister, Mrs. Bart Brennan, of Salem, and three children, John, Edward and Joan Reed, of this city.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Anticipation of enjoyment by faithful music lovers was rewarded last night by Rudolph Ganz, guest conductor for the National Symphony Orchestra, who had chosen for the first two numbers an operatic overture of indubitable genius and one of the great violin concertos.

That Weber's "Euryanthe" failed on the stage was not the fault of the music but of an almost insufferably dull libretto. The overture, perennially fresh and firmly fixed in the concert repertoire, reminds us now and then that the composer was far in advance of his period. Weber laid the foundations for the musicdrama that Wagner reared to such impressive heights, and had he not died at 39 the history of opera would have contained another chapter on the struggle for supremacy between two masters.

For Weber is the link between Gluck and Wagner, and "Euryanthe" is the first example of a theatrical score written from beginning to end on an intellectual basis. It also marks the inauguration of the "unbroken flow of melody," the device with which Wagner wrought such magical feats. That the public did not understand the importance of his innovations in this work was a severe blow to Weber, who for more than a year did not compose a note, and lamented to his friends: "I have no desire for music-paper and pianoforte, and could very easily persuade myself that I had once been a tailor."

The violin masterpiece which Mr. Ganz brought forward with Concertmaster Millard Taylor as soloist was Max Bruch's D minor concerto, Op. 44. Not as familiar to the average listener as the one in G minor, it is in every respect as noble and moving a work. With a remarkable gift for melodic writing, Bruch endowed all his music with beauty, and when he emerges from the shadow of Brahms, as he will in the course of time, many of his compositions now neglected will be fully appreciated.

Mr. Taylor read the concerto eloquently with a persuasively singing tone and an easy command of technique. Though handicapped by the effect of humidity on his strings, he maintained an admirable intonation and a perfect clarity of phrasing.

The program included two Wagnerian excerpts from "Die Meistersinger" and "Die Goetterdaemmerung," and in them the orchestra yielded to Mr. Ganz all that he asked for in the way of sonority and color. Particularly effective was the sombre introduction to the third act of "Die Meistersinger," that marvelous bit of musical psychology which expresses the meditations of Hans Sachs.

Emerson Whithorne's "Fandango," a novelty to the orchestra, seemed to have been insufficiently rehearsed, but even had the musicians been letter perfect in the score, the music would not have been noteworthy. Its principal interest in rhythmical, and the few melodic ideas have been smothered in the instrumentation.

The weakness of the Whithorne score was thrown into relief by the vitality and grace of Bizet as exemplified in the first suite from the "L'Arlesienne." This was followed by Saint-Saens' "Danse Macabre" and Chaikovski's "Capriccio Italien."

Mr. Ganz, who has always been a welcome visitor at the "Sunset Symphonies" since they were started, was recalled warmly at the close of the concert. His response to the demonstration was two extra numbers—Johan Halvorsen's "Entry of the Boyards" and the "Dance of the Clowns," from Rimski-Korsakov's "Snow Maiden."

D. C. Zoo Gets Rare Saki and Owl Monkeys

New Yorker Sells Scientific Specimens At Very Low Price

The generosity of a New York man enlarged the National Zoological Park collection yesterday by a family of five rare owl monkeys, a pair of even rarer saki monkeys and an unusual marmoset.

They formerly belonged to a New York woman who had them under scientific observation. She died recently and her husband offered to sell the pets to the Washington zoo at a nominal price.

The family of dourocouli, or owl monkeys, consists of mother, father and three babies. Except for the lemur, which is not a true monkey, the dourocouli is the only nocturnal monkey. It has an owl-like face and sleeps by day, roaming for food at night.

Friendly but timid, it is a native of the Upper Amazon region in South America. The saki monkey, which is more aggressive, comes from the same locality.

The zoo has had only one saki in the past, and that was many years ago, said Director William M. Mann. Col. Theodore Roosevelt is thought to have the only other representatives of the species in this country. He keeps them at his Oyster Bay, Long Island, estate.

Flue-Cured Leaf Crop Estimate Revised Upward

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department yesterday increased its estimate of the 1939 record flue-cured tobacco crop, now being marketed, to 1,028,460,000 pounds.

The revised forecast, based on the August condition of the crop, was about 6,000,000 pounds greater than the crop reporting board's estimate of indicated production in July, 1,022,595,000 pounds.

Upward revisions of probable production in North Carolina and Virginia offset slight decreases in the estimates for South Carolina and Georgia.

The board increased its estimate of flue-cured production in North Carolina from 694,030,000 pounds in July to 708,180,000, and the Virginia forecast from 88,935,000 pounds to 93,775,000.

The August estimate of burley tobacco was 347,843,000 pounds; flue-cured, 94,781,000 pounds; southern Maryland, 27,667,000 pounds, and cigar types, 119,993,000 pounds, all about the same as the July indicated production figures.

80 Post Carriers Off on Holiday At Atlantic City

Prize Recipes Listed for Pie, Spiced Fruit

Mrs. Mildred Waltman First in Contest With Norwegian Delicacy

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

A PATRICIAN among the fruits of the vine are the royal grapes so abundant at this time of year. The contestants of The Post recipe contest are not like the sly fox of "Aesop's Fables" who took a longing look at the luscious bunches hanging high over his head and decided as they were beyond his reach they were sour grapes. This classical fruit is presented in a galaxy of taste-tempting guises by The Post contestants.

A Royal Torte

Mrs. Waltman

Mrs. Mildred Waltman, a registered nurse living at 17 East Mason avenue, Alexandria, submitted a recipe for a delicious grape pie. This recipe, she writes, has been in use in a Norwegian family for many years. For her touch of grape flavoring to a pie, Mrs. Waltman wins the first award of $3. She also gives directions for keeping the grapes for future use.

Grape Pie

Pick grapes off stems; wash, separate skins and pulp. Put pulp on to cook, cooling only long enough to loosen seeds. Strain through sieve. Next put skins and pulp together. Let boil for 10 minutes. Cook without water preferably. They are then ready to can in sterilized jars for future use; or can be used at once. Never put sugar in until ready to use in pie. For 1 medium sized pie use 1 cup sugar to 2 cups pulp. Heat and thicken with 3 tablespoons cornstarch (moistened with water). Place in a baked pie shell and cover with meringue made of 1 or 2 egg whites and 3 teaspoons sugar, beaten until stiff. Let brown in oven slowly.

For Future Reference

Now is the time to prepare spiced grapes to serve with your Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner. Miss Ruth Fullmer, 2219 Minnesota avenue southeast, is one to plan ahead, and she suggests the preservation of the grape by a spice method. Miss Fullmer wins the second prize of $2 for her suggested use of the grape.

Miss Fullmer

Spiced Grapes

Select firm, ripe grapes. Pick them over carefully and wash well; remove them from their stems. Press pulp from skins. Simmer pulp until soft and then press through ricer or sieve to remove seeds. Add the pulp and the skins to 4 pounds of sugar, 1 pint of mild vinegar, 1-inch stick of cinnamon, 2 dozen cloves and 1 grated nutmeg. Simmer gently for 2 hours. Seal in sterilized jars. A cup of pecans or walnut meats may be added after the mixture has cooked for about an hour and a half.

It's amazing what nourishment and delight you can mix into a simple-to-make beverage such as Buttermilk Grape Punch or Grape Frappe. If you haven't tried the smooth, tangy blending of grapejuice and buttermilk, or lemon and orange juice and grapejuice, then you've denied yourself a real treat. These warm August days are ideal for serving such cooling beverages, any time of the day or night

Pantry-Shelf Sweet

A gleaming row of jellies and jam would not be complete without some grape conserve. It is delicious to serve with hot biscuits. Mrs. B. C. Phillips, 631 Allison street northwest, wins a $1 award with her recipe for grape conserve. Conserve made by Mrs. Phillips' recipe will receive the same acclaim that our grandmothers' used to merit.

Mrs. Phillips

Grape Conserve

Wash 4 pounds of grapes; separate skins from pulp. Cook pulp until soft; sieve to remove seeds. Add skins put through the food chopper; stir in 8 cups sugar, and the juice of 3 oranges and 2 lemons. Thinly slice orange and lemon rinds; cover with cold water and bring to a boiling point. Drain. Add to grapes and fruit juices. Cook until thick, about 40 minutes. Add 2 cups California walnut meats. Makes about 12 8-ounce glasses.

A Wish From Grandma

Bread pudding glorified with the grape and served with a rich nutritious custard sauce wins for Mrs. F. W. Bauman, 175 V street northeast, a prize of $1. This is a splendid way to utilize left-over bread into a very appealing dessert. Certainly no one will ever say they do not like bread pudding when made according to Mrs. Baumann's recipe.

Mrs. Bauman

Recipe Contest

THEME—Dishes featuring apple.

CLOSING DATE—Noon, Saturday, August 19.

PRIZES—First, $3; second, $2; third, fourth and fifth, $1 each.

Mail entries to Martha Ellyn, The Post Food Editor.

Grandmother's Grape Pudding

Remove crusts from 4 thin slices white bread and cut into pieces 1 inch wide and 2 inches long. Spread each piece with butter. Wash and drain 2 cups grapes. Crush with 1 cup sugar and put through potato ricer. Add 1 cup boiling water to the strained fruit. Heat to boiling point. Pour enough hot mixture into a deep casserole to cover the bottom. Arrange 1-3 of the buttered bread pieces on top. Add more grape mixture, another layer of bread pieces, more grape mixture and the rest of the bread being careful to cover the last layer of bread with the grape mixture. Allow to stand in a cool place from 4 to 8 hours. Invert on platter and serve with a custard sauce made as follows. Scald 1 cup milk in a double boiler. Pour over 1 egg yolk, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1½ teaspoons cornstarch and 1-8 teaspoon salt, which have been beaten together. Cook until thickened. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Mask inverted pudding with the sauce. Allow to cool. Garnish with ½ cup whipped cream, using a pastry tube. Serves six.

'Wrong-Way' Delight

A new treat in the grape line is an Upside-Down-Cake. Mrs. E. F. Smith, 868 Park avenue, Baltimore, wins an award of $1 with her recipe for this Grape Cake. Accented with orange and lemon, and served with whipped cream, it is sure to be a recipe that you will want to develop now that grapes are becoming so plentiful.

Mrs. Smith

Grape Upside Down Cake

Skin 1 quart stemmed Concord grapes, reserving the skins. Put pulp in saucepan and heat to boiling. Rub through coarse sieve to remove seeds. Add a pinch of salt, rind of 1 orange and ¼ cup of sugar to the skins and pulp. Blend 1 tablespoon cornstarch and 1 tablespoon water; mix with grapes and cook 5 minutes until mixture thickens. Pour into bottom of deep square pan or large hot iron skillet.

To make the batter, beat 3 egg yolks until thick and add 1 cup sugar, grated rind of 1 lemon, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 3 tablespoons water and 1 cup sifted cake or pastry flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and a pinch of salt. Fold into the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour batter over the grape mixture. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 25 to 30 minutes. Cool for 15 minutes in pan and turn out upside down onto a platter. Serve warm with whipped cream.

Skewered Cocktail Treat

Try this new tid-bit at your next cocktail party: Alternate thin slices of bacon and onions on 2-inch skewers. Broil until browned, quickly dip them in a shallow bowl of catsup and chili sauce. Reheat for a second and serve.

Lavender-Blue Rinse Brings Out Fay Bainter's Gray

Hollywood, Calif.—While the average actress reaches for the dark crayon when she notes the first silver thread in her hair, Fay Bainter rejoices because the new film used in "Daughters Courageous," her latest Warner Bros. picture, shows her sprinkling of gray.

She considers gray hair, regularly brushed, frequently shampooed, and rinsed with water containing a dash of lavender-blue coloring, the most flattering of all tresses. Fay warns, however, that no hair requires more infinite care in dressing. Long bobs, exotic coiffures and a superabundance of curls are taboo, but being overconservative is just as bad when the silver highlights appear. Now, as never before, a woman needs the services of an excellent hair stylist.

Shadow Box Rivals Beauty Of a Painting

Still-Life Objects Tastefully Grouped Behind a Frame

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WHEN is a picture on a wall not a picture? The answer is—when it's a shadow box. A number of decorators of late have been creating pictures with graceful small objects that make lovely still-life groupings. These are arranged on a shelf framed with a deep molding and usually with the wall back of it covered with a deep-toned velvet. The effect is actually that of a picture.

We've seen the idea developed effectively with a turquoise vase holding pale pink flowers and a pair of old Chinese figurines against a background of mauve velvet and framed with a wide white molding. Another charming shadow box held a low bowl with an evergreen branch and an old bronze Buddha against a background of gold tea box paper and with a frame of natural wood stained dark. Another simpler shadow box composition had a big Italian pottery plate standing against a background of blue velvet and grouped with a graceful silver pitcher. Another used a clear Venetian glass vase of exquisite workmanship with a pair of Dresden figurines against a shell-pink background and framed in a mirror molding.

But the possibilities of this idea are almost endless. The way to go about it is to take some treasured bibelots, group it with one or two other objects to make an artistic arrangement, then have a deep frame built for them and cover the back wall within the frame area with a suitable and interesting color. Don't balance the grouping too exactly—for instance, if you have a pair of bibelots with a vase in the center, the flowers in the vase can droop a little to one side to take the stiff edge off.

A large shadow box is suitable for an important wall over a sofa or over a mantel, or a small one to use in less of a focal place.

Summer Hints

Summer Salad Dressing

If your summer salads need a new thousand island dressing, try this recipe: 1 cup mayonnaise, 2 tablespoons chili sauce, 2 hard-cooked eggs chopped fine, 2 teaspoons finely chopped green pepper, 1 small avocado, mashed; 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon vinegar, salt and pepper, a whiff of grated onion.

Cerise Lift

Glazed cherries are delicious with ham, pork or veal. Pour a cup of sucked cherries into a frying pan. Sprinkle half a cup of granulated sugar over them and simmer until the cherries are well glazed. One tablespoon of lemon juice and a quarter of a teaspoon of cinnamon give a little extra lift. These cherries go well with fried chicken, too.

Frosting for Glasses

To frost the rims of glasses in which you serve chilled beverages, dip them into lime and lemon juice, mixed, and then run them around in a bowl of confectioner's sugar. Let them stand a half hour or so.

Learn Art of Speaking

DID YOU EVER make a speech—at your club perhaps—and find your listeners restless, uninterested?

"I'm just not a speaker," you think. But the truth is speakers are made—not born. The little faults that keep an audience eyeing the clock can be corrected.

If you have ever listened to the conversation of a person whose thoughts seemed to be far away, you'll understand why people don't react favorably to a speaker who looks everywhere but at them.

But if you establish a direct, friendly "eye contact," stand erect with weight evenly distributed on the balls of your feet, hold your hands still—what a difference! You may be making your first long speech, but your audience will sit up as respectfully as if you were an old hand at it.

As for that huge manuscript without which you feel so lost, use it only in rehearsing at home. Jot down the main points on small pieces of paper, refer to them only when you need to. You'll get along beautifully.

Knowing parliamentary forms, how to address the chair, is a confidence giver, too. If the chairman is introducing you, don't rise until her speech is over, then with a slight bow to her say, "Thank you, Madame Chairman."

Pointers like these from our 40-page booklet, SELF-INSTRUCTION IN PUBLIC SPEAKING, help you speak effectively at clubs, forums, anywhere. Contains complete instructions on preparing and presenting speeches, training your voice. Gives rules of parliamentary procedure, sample speeches—of nomination, welcome, acceptance of office, others. Tips on radio speaking.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, SELF-INSTRUCTION IN PBLIC SPEAKING, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Corner Cleaning

Use crumpled soft tissue paper to remove dust from the corners of rooms with polished floors. Sprinkle a little furniture or floor polish on the paper so the dust will adhere to it.

Child Appetite Needs a Fillip In Summer

Variety in Presenting Foods Lends Zest to Tables Set Outdoors

By Marsha Ellyn.

The Post Food Editor.

WHEN THE APPETITES of the little ones seem to lag in warm weather, a new setting and presentation of their foods may help a great deal. Serving refreshments at their own little tables in the out of doors may give their food new taste appeal. Many departures from the familiar way of serving their foods may be worked out.

Martha Ellyn

Cut a smiling face on an apple, or refer to ordinary foods, such as cottage cheese, as "snowballs," gelatin salads as "Hawaiian Wiggle," and mashed potatoes centered with a poached egg as "Bird's Nest," and these dishes will not only taste better but intrigue the children's fancy.

As long as the little folks are growing, they are adding to the length and size of their bones and muscles and to the enlargement of their bodies as a whole. Baby teeth come through the gums, serve their purpose and drop out and others come to fill their places. For this steady and rapid growth, more of some substances than of others are needed. Calcium and phosphorus are necessary substances and they are not found equally in all foods. But they are present abundantly in all whole milk. Milk in any form is the most economical and the most easily utilized food through which children can get their requirement of these substances.

Milk is not a perfect food, but it is our most nearly perfect food. It is most valuable for maintaining the well-being of all the tissues of the body, for promoting the growth and maturity of bones and teeth, and for supplying an easily digested necessary fat, rich in vitamin A. Milk in any form, either irradiated, evaporated, bottled or dried, fulfills some of the most important requirements of the body.

Milk to be valuable does not have to be drunk. If it is included in the day's diet no matter in what form, whether a soup, a creamed vegetable, custard or pudding, it serves the body as well.

Children love velvety custards. Topped with a snowy meringue or fresh fruit the appeal is always greater to the child than a plain dish. Banana custard is a delicate dessert for the little tots.

Banana Custard

Mix ¼ cup sugar, 3 tablespoons flour and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add 2 cups milk. Cook until thickened, then boil for 5 minutes. Add gradually to 1 egg beaten slightly and cook for 1 minute longer. Cool. Add ¼ teaspoon vanilla and 2 diced bananas. Serves 6.

Spanish cream, too, is a custard dessert which is chock full of milk and eggs and good for the children, if but a small amount of flavoring is used.

Orange Eggnog

Orange eggnog is a drink that children like. Beat 1 egg yolk with ¼ cup orange juice and 2 tablespoons sugar. Pour into a tall glass. Beat 1 egg white stiff with 1 tablespoon sugar, and fold ¾ of egg white into yolk mixture. Add milk to almost fill glass and stir well. Top drink with remainder of beaten egg white and garnish with grated orange rind.

'One Hot Dish' Menu Selected

One of the rules that you should keep up your sleeve is to have at least one hot dish for the meal, no matter how torrid the day. So cream and mushroom soup is a good introduction to cold meat and potato salad. Buy some of the delicious canned mushroom soup, some canned tongue or slices of cooked ham or corned beef and develop a nourishing and appetizing meal with little effort. The following menu can be easily prepared.

Menu
- Mushroom Soup
- Assorted Cold Meats
- Potato Salad
- Ripe and Green Olives
- Radish Roses
- Hot Biscuits
- Whole Peeled Apricots
- Iced Beverage

Shades of Green For Bridge Plate

If you are going to entertain at bridge and want food that will look cool and be cool, serve a bridge plate in shades of green, that includes not only a salad of unusual combination but also tiny assorted sandwiches.

The Salad

Arrange cubes of honeydew melon on a bed of cress and season with a lime dressing. Arrange thin slices of unpeeled cucumbers in overlapping rows. Garnish with ripe olives and complete with four tiny sandwiches.

Sandwich Spreads

No. 1. Blend deviled ham and cream cheese, using equal parts of each.

No. 2. Season cream cheese with salt and salted pecans, chopped fine.

A Meal in a Drink

If you want a meal in a cool drink try making a nourishing beverage of malted milk and strawberry ice cream.

Place 1 quart of milk, ½ cup chocolate-flavored malted milk, ½ pint strawberry ice cream, ½ teaspoon salt and ½ cup chipped ice in a shaker. Shake vigorously until thoroughly blended. Pour into tall glasses and serve. Serves four.

Essential Form Of Beds Has Varied Little in Centuries

BEDS were in the first place probably leaves with an animal skin thrown over them, but we can only guess about that. The first bed that we have record of was amazingly like the basic bed structure today, in that it had a frame with four legs, and the frame was either laced with rush or strips of hide, or else, if it were solid, had animal skins thrown over it for softness. The general shape of the earliest beds we have any pictures of took quite naturally the forms of animals elongated and flattened so that a person could recline on the back. They don't look very comfortable, and considering that they were often made of stone, ivory or metal, we doubt if they were comfortable according to standards of today.

The Greeks were the first as far as we know to have a bed with turned legs, a type that was further developed by the Romans and Pompeiians. Many Greek beds were inlaid with precious metals, while beds of wood were decorated with tortoise shell or fancy veneers.

The pillow in those early beds was a wooden block shaped to fit the head, somewhat like that still in use in Japan today. Weaving, one of the earliest arts developed by man, provided linen sheets at least as far back as the Egyptians, who also had folding beds.

The mattress is mentioned as far back as the third century B. C., when it was filled with vegetable fibres, refuse wool or feathers. Heavily draped beds were used as far back as the sixth century B. C., and there are those who claim that iron beds were used around 400 B. C. So it looks as if very little in the essential form of beds is really so modern after all.

Pineapple Crochet Design Used in New Way for Square

diamond ring look larger and a lot more dazzling—in about 5 minutes?

Well, here's the beauty treatment for diamonds from a Fifth avenue, velvet-hushed jewelry house. Like most great beauty secrets, it's mainly soap and water!

Put a few drops of ammonia in a little boiling water and whisk up a brisk suds with milk, white soap. Scrub your rings with a small, soft handbrush and dry in a linen handkerchief (it has no fuzz or loose threads to catch in the ring's settings.)

Horseradish and Cream

Here is a new topper for cream of tomato soup—add a dash of horseradish to whipped cream and place on the soup just before it is served. The pungency of the horseradish does much for the tomato.

August Is Time to Beware of Poison Ivy Most Deceptive in Appearance Then About 33% of Population, Susceptible

THE POISON IVY is more venomous in August than any other month. It is somewhat more deceptive in its appearance then, and more vacationists are abroad to make contacts.

Rhus is a low shrub or vine with inconspicuous yellow flowers, followed by a white fruit. It has smooth, light green leaves with three leaflets each. The poison oak is very similar in general structure, although the leaves are more serrated.

Both plants grow over the entire area of the United States and Canada from British Columbia to California, except in desert and high mountainous regions. Poison ivy is the prevalent species in the eastern part of the continent; poison oak in the western. The poison sumac is of a different family. It grows mostly in swampy regions over the same area.

Poison by Contact

These are the three plants which commonly poison by contact. Although their appearance and habits have been described and pictured over and over again, I find that even those who are sensitive to the poison are not always able to recognize the plant.

Poison ivy dermatitis is caused by the contact on the skin of an oily substance, secreted by the plant, called cardol. Any part of the plant is poisonous. Not only contact, but even exposure to the smoke from a fire in which rhus is burning will produce the characteristic eruption. It is even said that being down wind from a plant will do so, but this seems very unlikely.

Some Are Immune

Only certain people are sensitive to it. This has been disputed. It is important for the question of prevention that it should be settled. If prevention is possible by the use of rhus extract, plainly only those who are likely to be affected should be troubled with the injections.

There are some experiments that are quite conclusive to my mind. Brown and, independently, Kraus and Wiedman made experiments on human volunteers. Animals are apparently entirely immune. Cats, dogs, monkeys, white mice, guinea pigs, rabbits and pigeons were all tried by applying the virus directly to the bare skin, or even skin which had been excoriated, but no dermatitis developed. This is contrary to previous belief, because White stated that hunting dogs developed sore eyes from the plants.

Volunteers Are Tested

Twenty human volunteers were used. Twelve believed they were immune and eight thought from experience that they were susceptible. The test was made by applying the virus to the bare skin and then to the abraded skin.

Two of the 12 supposed immune proved susceptible at once. Among those who thought they were susceptible, four reacted only when the virus was applied to abraded skin. When the whole group of 20 was tested by application of virus to the abraded skin, only 4 did not react.

This is admittedly a more severe test than is usually the rule in nature, but it proves conclusively that natural immunity does exist.

For rough purposes it may be said that about 33 per cent of the population is susceptible.

Bread Still Staff Of Army Life

The value of bread as an energy food is shown by the fact that recruits of the Citizens Military Training Camp Regiment at Fort Dix, N. J., have consumed an average of nine slices of bread a day. This amount, which is considerably above that used by the general population, corresponds to the quantity of bread eaten daily by West Point Cadets.

According to mess officers at Fort Dix, some 1,100 young men in the Citizens Military Training Camp regiment stowed away approximately 50,000 pounds of bread during the first half of their month's training period. They also used 3,300 pounds of butter and more than 32,000 bottles of milk. Huge quantities of meat, fruits and vegetables likewise were included in this well-balanced diet of protective and energy-giving foods.

Bread has always bulked large in the daily fare of military forces, according to the Department of Nutrition of the American Institute of Baking, which states that armies march on bread because it is an economical and easily digestible source of necessary food-energy, as well as of muscle-building proteins and other desirable nutrients.

Cocoanut Sirup for Waffles

Brand new from Manila is a sirup made of cocoanuts, which Anne Shirley, RKO radio star, is serving with hot cakes or waffles. She reports that her guests cry for more.

Icebox Pudding Boon on Hot Day

If you want to make a grand dessert which tastes as if you had spent hours in the kitchen, but which really takes only a few minutes to prepare, try making a date ice box pudding. Make it right after breakfast, then put in the refrigerator. You don't even have to light the oven or scald milk on the top of the stove, which is certainly to be considered in the summer heat.

Date Ice Box Pudding

Crush 3 cups bran flakes and 1 cup cornflakes and combine; reserve ½ cup. To the remaining mixture add a dash of salt, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon grated orange rind, 1 cup finely cut dates, 1 cup broken walnut meats; then add 1 cup milk and mix. Shape into a roll about 8 inches long. Sprinkle outside with reserved ½ cup bran flakes. Wrap in waxed paper and chill 5 to 6 hours, or until firm. Serve in slices; top with whipped cream. Serves eight.

Capital Welcomes 12-Year-Old Princess

Daughter of Maharana Saheb of Dharampur, India, Here With Her Father, Is Enthusiastic About American Food

Washington society has grown a bit blase about royalty, thanks to the parade of crowned heads and future rulers which has passed through here during the spring and early summer. But not for a long time has the Capital welcomed an Indian princess, especially as charming a one as little Princess Rajendrakunvar Baiji Saheb, who is here with her father.

The little princess—she is only 12—is the daughter of the Maharana Saheb of Dharampur, an Indian state near Bombay, and the pair are occupying a suite at the Shoreham. They will devote two days here to sightseeing.

When interviewed yesterday, the princess wore the traditional sari of Indian women. A fine piece of soft transparent cloth, so fine it looked almost like chiffon, her sari was bright red with little figured dots of green. Wound about her shoulders and across her head was a mantle of cloth of gold, with short, puffed sleeves, adding the only modern touch. The princess bears on her forehead a red caste mark, made with powder.

Diamonds in Ears Add Splendor

Diamonds in her ears and a simple necklace about her throat enhanced the appearance of the dark-eyed princess. Around her wrist were jeweled red and gold bands, which the princess insisted were not bracelets, but bangles. It seems that it is a matter of pride with the women of India to have just the right color of bangles to match each sari.

Although she is a princess, she attends public school along with hundreds of other children in her native state. This is partly because her father inaugurated the first free school system in the state, financing the huge project from his own pocket.

Right now the princess is doing some outside studying for the next term of school, and her trip to America, which has taken her from the West Coast to the East, is teaching her more about geography than her less fortunate fellow students will probably ever know.

The little princess did not know what grade in school she belonged to, as the system there is so different from ours. However, when told that most 12-year-old American girls were in the sixth grade, she decided that she too, was in the sixth grade.

Princess Loves Native Music

Like her father, who is an accomplished musician, Rajendrakunvar Baiji Saheb has a keen interest in music, and plays skillfully on the harmonium, a native instrument resembling a harp. She is just learning to speak English, and travels with a secretary and chaperon, Mrs. Shushila Devi Bhatkal, who yesterday peeked out from her room to see how her little charge was getting along in her interview.

While she is still so busy in school, the young lady doesn't have much time for sport or amusement, but when she gets a little older she hopes to accompany her father on one of his famous hunting expeditions. A noted "Skiekari," which means great hunter, the Maharana has bagged 300 tigers on his various expeditions.

The princess is enthusiastic about American food. Yesterday for luncheon in her Shoreham suite she enjoyed planked chicken, potatoes, tomatoes stuffed with rice, and curried lamb with chutney sauce—the last was the only Indian dish.

When their two days here are up, the Maharana and his daughter will go to New York before returning to Bombay. The princess reported that she has enjoyed the two months she has spent in America very much, but would not tell what she liked best. She and her father have already seen the San Francisco Exposition, and are looking forward to a visit to the New York Fair.

Meems Leave For Colorado

Boarding the 11:40 train last night, Harry Grant Meem and his daughter Eleanor left for Colorado Springs, Colo., to be the guests of Mr. Meem's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, jr.

Mrs. Meem is with the young McLeans already and has been since before the birth of their daughter several weeks ago. It is expected that the McLeans will make a visit to Washington this fall before their annual trip to Palm Beach.

The Meems have tentative plans for a jaunt to San Francisco following their visit with the McLeans. In any event, the three of them will return to their home here on Thirty-sixth place by the middle of September.

Eleanor Meem is looking forward to a "working winter," as the doctor has prescribed a job for her. Just what she will do she has not settled.

China Ambassador Back From Lecture At Michigan U.

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, will return this weekend from Ann Arbor, Mich., where he went several days ago to lecture at the Institute of Far Eastern Studies, of the University of Michigan.

Last year Dr. Shih delivered a series of lectures before the institute but his diplomatic duties have been too pressing here and this is the first he has been able to deliver this year.

Dr. and Mrs. Hetzel Leave for Vacation

Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, who have remained in Washington for most of the summer, will leave next week for a vacation. They are going to Gibson Island, a popular resort with Washingtonians, for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong. Mrs. Hetzel has just returned from a trip to New York, where she stocked up on clothes for the shop she will open here October 1.

Miss Bainbridge Is Engaged

Of interest to Washington is the engagement of Barbara Bainbridge to Angus McIntosh which has been announced by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. William Seaman Bainbridge, of Gramercy Park, N. Y., and Maple Hill Farm, Bethel, Conn. Mr. McIntosh is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McIntosh, of Healeyfield, Cleadon, County Durham, England.

This news will be especially interesting to the young set, for Miss Bainbridge was quite well known here, having visited frequently with Mrs. Consuelo Seone at her home in Georgetown.

The prospective bride was graduated from the Brearley School and Vassar College. She studied abroad, having spent a year in Liege and some time at the International Summer School at Madrid and Santander. Miss Bainbridge was presented to society by her parents several seasons ago at Sherry's in New York City.

Mr. McIntosh was graduated from Oriel College, Oxford, and was a Harmsworth scholar at Merton College from 1934 to 1936. He holds the degree of master of arts from Oxford and Harvard.

Mrs. Summerlin Chooses Monday As Moving Day

Plans for moving into her new house on Massachusetts avenue have kept Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., in town during the warm months, one delay after another in redecorating having caused her to postpone departure. However, much to her delight, Monday has been decided on as the day Mrs. Summerlin will leave her apartment at 1302 Eighteenth street.

Later she hopes to go to Cooperstown, N. Y., where her daughter, Miss Virginia Summerlin, is in camp.

Her new house, on Massachusetts avenue just off Sheridan Circle, is an attractive red brick residence, and was formerly the home of Mrs. Harrison Cassard and her daughter, Mrs. Charles Agle, who was then Miss Dorothy Cassard.

Edith Wright To Come Out In Havana

Debut for Daughter Of Envoy to Cuba Set for Winter

Blonde Miss Edith Wright, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Cuba and Mrs. J. Butler Wright, will make her debut in Havana next winter. With her older sister, Miss Mary Wright, the future debutante landed in New York a few days ago and after a brief stay in New York went to Beverly Farms, Mass., to spend some time with their aunt, Mrs. Edmund Richardson, formerly Mrs. Louis Bacon.

Ambassador and Mrs. Wright will join their daughters here next month, and will see the World's Fair before going back to Cuba. Miss Mary Wright, who is a frequent visitor in Washington, has been serving her mother as assistant hostess at the embassy.

Miss Edith Wright will leave soon for a visit at Newport with Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, who will give a tea dance for her at the Gould villa August 24. Miss Wright will arrive at Newport for tennis week, the gayest time of the season at the resort.

Whether the daughter of the Ambassador and Mrs. Wright will make her debut in Washington this coming season has not yet been decided. But there is a chance that her name will be added to the fast growing list of the fall and winter buds.

Henry Wallace To Wed Today

The wedding of Miss Florence Elizabeth Kling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kling, of Kellogg, Iowa, to Henry Browne Wallace, son of the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, will take place this morning in the Plymouth Congregational Church in Des Moines, Iowa, and will be followed by a buffet breakfast in the church lounge.

Miss Jean Wallace, who with her mother has been in Des Moines since early summer, will be maid of honor at her brother's wedding, and Robert Wallace will be an usher. The Secretary and Mrs. Wallace will witness the ceremony, the Secretary having left earlier in the week for Des Moines. He has spent most of the summer at his desk in Washington.

J. P. Morgan Leases Castle

J. B. Morgan, one of America's most ardent devotees of the Scot sport, grouse shooting, has leased Gannochy Castle, the ancient estate of the Earl of Dalhousie, for the hunting season, which starts Saturday. He will leave his home in Aldenham, England, shortly for the shooting.

Also in search of grouse are Mrs. J. Cornelius Rathbone, jr., of Baltimore and Virginia; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mills, of Old Westbury, Long Island, and Mrs. Mills' mother, Mrs. A. Felix duPont, who sailed together recently for England. En route the group will pick up Mrs. Rathbone's sister, Miss Page Huidekoper, who has been spending the season in London.

Chilean Counselor And Wife Return From Trip North

The Commercial Councelor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell have returned from a motor tour—covering 2,700 miles in all—of New England and Canada.

En route home they drove through Asbury Park, N. J., where they left their daughter Eleonor with Mr. and Mrs. Jose Duany at their cottage in Asbury, for three weeks.

The Campbells left Washington around the middle of last month for Boston and Cape Cod. They motored through Maine and on to Quebec, Montreal, Ottowa and Toronto. They visited Niagara Falls on their way back.

Miss Flood Goes To Middleburg

Miss Eleanor Flood left yesterday for Middleburg, Va., for a visit of several days with Miss Nancy Iselin, who has been a house guest of Miss Flood and her mother, Mrs. Fenry Dewarr Flood, at the Shoreham.

Miss Flood also has had as her house guests her cousins, Miss Margaret Byrd, of Winchester, Va.; Robert Portner, of New oYrk, and Richard E. Byrd, of Berryville, Va.

The Arthur Smiths To Honor Guest

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith have as their house guest Comdr. Robert Thomas, U. S. N., and will give a dinner in his honor tomorrow at the Congressional Country Club.

In the group will be Mr. and Mrs. Earl Clark Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Kinney, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lathrom, Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker, Mrs. H. B. Willson and Barse Stonebraker.

Announce Birth

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew B. Young of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter last Tuesday. Mrs. Young is the former Miss Olive Sherley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Swagar Sherley of Washington.

Your Figure Madame!

Exercise Is Never More Important Than After Baby Is Born

WHAT we do not blame on our ancestors, we are inclined to blame on our children. Women are always harking back to the nice slim figures they used to have—before Junior or Janet arrived. It is true that a majority of the bad figures date from this experience, but it need not be so.

Probably the trouble is that women seem to have such boundless confidence that nature will take care of everything in due time. They feel so nice and flat! But those muscles are stretched and flabby. And flabby muscles continue to take on fat, the excess weight interferes with activity—making a further gain easy—and so it goes!

This is the one time in a woman's life when exercise is a downright necessity. Many obstetricians agree that you will be stronger at the end of the two weeks in bed if a few simple exercises are performed during this recuperative period. With your doctor's permission, you may begin mild abdominal exercise the first week following the baby's arrival.

Exercise Is Mild

This first exercise is so mild that you might fail to recognize it as exercise! The movements consist mainly of rasing the arms slowly overhead, trying to press the small of the back down flat against the mattress, and bending the head forward on the chest and raising the head and shoulders just enough to clear the bed. Another exercise sometimes given at this time is to lie on the stomach for 30 minutes, night and morning, with a pillow above and below the breasts to protect them.

In the second week the exercise may be slightly increased and the following may be taken:

Lie flat on the back, knees flexed and feet on the bed, arms down at the sides on the bed. Pull the lower abdominal muscles up and in and touch the small of the back to the bed. Then, inhaling, circle the arms up on the bed until they are straight overhead. Exhale as the arms are circled back to the sides and the feet slid down on the bed.

By the third week you will be ready for fairly active exercises—but not a single one should be attempted until it has been approved by your doctor. You should perform all the movements slowly, relaxing completely between each exercise.

Girdle Gives Support

A well-fitted girdle will give support and help to prevent your becoming too tired. Another valuable aid is the uplift brassiere. Neither of these will tone the muscles, however, and the only real correction for stretched muscles is exercise.

Perhaps you should have looked into all this years ago, but it is never too late to remedy matters. You may not be able to see any improvement for some months, but you can have a nice figure again! You will probably get best results from exercises like this:

Lie on the floor on the back with knees flexed and feet on floor, arms down at the sides. Raise the hips off the floor until your body is in a straight line from knees to chest, and as you do so, fling the arms up on the floor overhead. Hold for a second, feeling the pull in all the muscles of chest and abdomen, then return to the beginning position.

Wardrobe Pick-Up Via Hollywood

Not that everyone can achieve that Hedy Lamarr look of destiny which she turns on for us here, but some of Hollywood's designing ways can be translated for Washington wardrobes. Among them are the snowy white turban, exotic native jewelry and cool, sleek coiffure which the dazzling Miss Lamarr affects for her forthcoming film as "Lady of the Tropics." Any darkly handsome girl on a modest Government salary can bolster up the morale of her end-of-summer wardrobe by adding a twisted head cloth of crepe or net and interesting costume jewelry in animated colorings and pattern

A Woman's New York

—By Alice Hughes.

George Raft, Movie Actor, Steals Show At Normandie's Sailing; Anne Lindbergh Visits Fair Disguised in Dark Glasses

New York, Aug. 10.

EVERY LUXURY liner which plies the Atlantic has "one big sailing" per summer—which means a trip on which "celebrities" of all types are thicker than stewards, who are usually quite thick. Generally these golden cargoes depart in June, but this summer people may have decided to wait until the war situation settled a bit. At any rate, the Normandie's big moment came with August—but it was worth waiting for.

ALICE HUGHES

Once such a cargo is lined up we begin betting on the hit of the troupe, and can you guess the star of Normandie's shimmering herd? It wasn't lovely Norma Shearer, nor Edward G. Robinson and family, nor comic Bob Hope, nor even Charles Boyer and his pretty wife, Pat Patterson. It wasn't Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and family, nor the newly married Marjorie Hillis, nor Laddie (Polo) Sanford and Mary Duncan, nor Roland Young, nor anyone of a score of others famed in diplomacy, society and the arts.

Nope, the Normandie's No. 1 attention-getter was little George Raft, the movie actor, who was born on New York's dingy west side, just a few blocks from the French Line pier. George went very big, indeed. Maybe it was his costume—a brown ensemble whose piece de resistance was a sports coat vivid with enormous checks. The little West Side boy came back to his home neighborhood and sailed for Europe in regal style, with longshoremen giving him a mighty hand and even asking for autographs. They were thrilled by the Raftian coat.

So the Normandie, "at long last," had her big sailing for the summer of 1939, leaving Aunt Alice dewy on the dock. But maybe it was perspiration, not tears of regret. Let's pretend so, anyway.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN — The transatlantic air traffic is getting all-fired thick around here, too. The base at Port Washington is becoming as busy as the Hudson River. On one day two clippers arrived from overseas, one took off, and a French flying boat landed from a survey flight. Among the passengers arriving from Europe on the Dixie Clipper was Mrs. Ogden Reid, our noted newspaper publisher. Elmer Rice, the playwright, was another. These Atlantic flights are thrilling matters.

Mrs. Gary Cooper, a mighty pretty girl, wore a long powder-blue suede coat over a silver-blue jersey sports dress at luncheon a few days back. Topping the whole was a blue felt cartwheel hat. She looked very fetching.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Buchtenkirch, of our town, have just celebrated their sixty-sixth wedding anniversary. He is 90, she is 91, and they were married right here in town in '73. Nice going, folks . . .

Who turned up at the Fair the other afternoon but Mrs. Charles Lindbergh, ill-concealed behind dark glasses. The former Anne Morrow, now a successful author who is capable of superb prose, was just looking around at the masterpieces of art when I saw her.

The famous doll house owned by Colleen Moore, a former movie star, is playing an enormous return engagement at one of our big stores. Showmen say that Fair visitors are giving it a great play . . .

And the theater is itself again, for Gertrude Lawrence has come back to town for tryouts of her play, "Skylark," seen briefly last spring.

The new fall negligees promise to be unusually beautiful, and to follow dress silhouettes, according to Tove. This means that some of them will have details like bustles, back and front fullness, and wasp waists. Looks as though the negligee is studying to be a street garment any day now.

Two Gay, Easy Apron Patterns

"KITCHEN DUTY will be a pleasure with these crisp, gay aprons to lighten your tasks. Two completely different versions from the single simple-to-stitch-up Claire Tilden Pattern 684. For the heavier morning work, make the apron with pointed pockets and neckline and bright ric-rac trim, in a sturdy checked gingham or percale. Then, for hostessing or serving tea, quickly cut and sew the daintier, round-necked style in crisp white organdie or a print, perhaps adding saucy little bows or buttons. Both versions have a yoked waist section that extends into a back-tying sash, making wonderfully sleek and slim lines, especially if cut on the bias. And both feature stay-in-place shoulders—a real blessing!

Pattern 684 is cut in sizes small, medium and large. Small size, round neck version, requires 2¼ yards 36-inch fabric and ⅝-yard ribbon; V-neck version, 2⅛ yards 36-inch fabric and 4⅛ yards ric-rac.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins for this pattern. Write clearly size, name, address and style number.

Mildew on Books

If mildew forms on your books during the warm, damp weather try this: Place several cans, half filled with lump lime, behind the books. The lime absorbs moisture and saves the books. Replace the lime when it becomes pulverized.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Neurotic, Alcoholic Father Exerts Hypnotic Spell Over Young Son's Personality; How Save Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My sister in California has been married for 12 years to a British veteran gassed in the World War. At the time of their marriage he had partially recovered his health. They were very happy for some years and they have a son now 9 years old. Five years ago the husband's health broke, so that he has since been unable to work. During the years of inactivity since, he has suffered a growing sense of bitter frustration which seeks release in heavy, continuous drinking. He refuses all medical aid, fearing the verdict and possible hospitalization, which might separate him from his son.

He quarrels with most of his relatives and friends and bullies my sister to the point where she feels it is impossible to go on. At the same time, there is much that is fine in the man. He is gifted—has written poems, songs and stories that have sincerity and power. He did genuinely love my sister, perhaps still does; and he adores his son. In his better hours, even now, he is a thoroughly delightful person. He has written delightful stories for children and my son and niece find him charming company. Possibly children do not challenge the sense of inferiority which may account for much of what he does.

After his health failed, my sister found a position as art teacher in the Los Angeles High School system. Her duties are difficult and exhausting and then she comes home to care for her husband and son. While she does it gladly, the emotional strain of the scenes, the bitterness, the scorn, the fault finding and anger, are too much for her. Perhaps if she were less gentle, patient and yielding, it would have been better. She is always quiet and sweet, planning and doing all she can for the two.

The boy is fine, imaginative, intelligent, self possessed and adores his father. Most of his training and education have come from the latter. However, in recent moods of deep depression the father has been unreasonably exacting with the boy, who becomes somewhat hystrical as a result. For that reason, my sister now hesitates to leave the boy alone with him. In previous years, she sometimes urged them to take a trip together and for a time the man would be happier.

When the mother is present, the boy escapes the burden of his father's nervous irritation, but he is now sometimes adopting his father's scornful attitude in speaking to his mother, although he is affectionate and very courteous for the most part. She feels the stress is more than she can bear, and bad for her son. If she should leave the boy with his father, she fears he would take him to England and she would be unable to find him again. Even if he did not do that, the father in his present condition is unable to care adequately for the boy. For instance, his appetite is capricious and the boy will not eat unless his father eats.

Yet the boy would much prefer to remain with his father; would be very unhappy at leaving him; and the mother could obtain him only by a legal battle. Lastly, she fears what her husband might do if the boy were taken from him. Without his son, life would have no meaning. And my sister, still loving him, or at least feeling a tender pity for him, finds it hard to strike such a blow. She trembles to think what the result might be. She feels she needs advice and I have told her I would ask your opinion. What should she do? Very sincerely yours,

WORRIED.

Unsentimental Heroism Required of Mother

DEAR WORRIED: The first question which came to my mind, after reading your letter, was this: "Is the man's neurotic behavior due to the fact that he was gassed during the war?" I put the question to a psychiatrist, who answers in the negative. He thinks it more likely the man "was fated to be psychotic," and that his is probably a hopeless decline.

Both of us feel that the child is entitled to first consideration, and that he should be removed, as quickly as possible, from the distraught atmosphere in which he is living. To subject him indefinitely to the physical and nervous hazards of his present home environment is to make him, too, a psychic cripple; permanently twisted in a neurotic pattern.

The mother is being both cowardly and shortsighted in permitting sentimental considerations to cloud the issue. She should be sternly courageous in discharging her moral obligation to safeguard the boy's well being, and she should not be swayed in her course by the emotionalism of either father or son. The judgment of the one is too warped by sickness and selfishness to be trusted; and the other, of course, is too young to know what is best for him.

Inasmuch as your sister is herself too worn and distrait to be able to analyze her problem objectively, she should by all means enlist the advisory services of some organization or agency in Los Angeles which specializes in the social protection of children. It occurs to me that the Institute of Family Relations, located at 607 South Hill street, in Los Angeles, over which Dr. Paul Popenoe presides, might prove an invaluably helpful ally.

Desperate situations require desperate remedies, and, as has been said, it is sometimes necessary to be cruel in order to be kind. Thus, if disinterested and enlightened advisers hold that the boy would profit by complete divorcement from his father's society, this step should be taken, regardless of the storm it provokes. Your sister should steel herself, if necessary, for a bitter legal battle leading to full custody of her son. As for "trembling to think what the result might be," to the father if denied his son as a playtime companion, let her rather tremble to think what may become of the son, if she fails to give him the benefits of a quiet, orderly childhood.

Better yet—let her not tremble at all. Let her do the right thing, as she is enabled by kindly counselors to see the right, and no matter what happens, she need feel no cause for regret. Only if she fails, in cowardly vacillation, to strike out boldly to succor her son from emotional enslavement to a neurotic father's hypnotic personality, will she have occasion for lasting, irremediable remorse.

Tribute to Fall

I cannot waste tears on a dying summer,
When fall is bringing styles that could not possibly be dumber,
Than big, grown-up Amazons running about town in pinafores,
Or wearing pink lastex swim suits down where the mad sea roars;
Than flabby heavyweights flaunting their yen for slacks,

Gallant George

"You certainly look mighty nice tonight, Miss Tooner. That's a pretty dress . . . Yes, I mean it! I really like black on a woman—that is, if she's begun to take on a little weight. I don't mean, of course, that you're fat but—well, you know, I really like to see a woman a little plump.

"Say! WHO is that girl in red there? . . . You don't? Well I've got to find out. I want to tell you she's the prettiest girl here tonight—that is I mean—well what I mean is she's the prettiest one among the younger girls. And look at her figure. Slim as a colt's!

"Do you know that Mrs. Steppit? The one in yellow? . . . Well now there's a woman who's really got IT. Of course now understand that I don't necessarily fall for that type . . . No, for a steady diet I really prefer a plain, everyday girl.

"Now WHO is that blonde over there? . . . Yes, in green? . . . She looks plenty dangerous to me. But then I always did have a weakness for blondes—no what I mean is, I like brunettes too. And then of course, Miss Tooner, you're not a regular brunette.

"Say, Miss Tooner, you know who's the best-dressed woman in this town? . . . Nancy Clipper. Yes, she wears her clothes with more style than any woman I know—what I mean is, any woman who goes in for that sort of thing. Of course, now a sensible woman like yourself—say, Miss Tooner, you look a little tired. Wouldn't you like to sit down awhile?

Nats Beat Yanks, 7-5; Appleton Stars in Role as Relief Pitcher

Sports — The Washington Post — Sports

Estalella's Single Scores Winning Run For Griffmen

Leonard Credited With 4th Victory Over Champions; Pearson Chased

By Shirley Povich.

Out of the bullpen came Pete Appleton yesterday to make his fifth relief-pitching appearance in the Nats' last ten ball games and clamp a quietus on the obstreperous New York Yankees. Thus, Washington won the ball game, 7 to 5.

Dutch Leonard was credited in the official score with being the winning pitcher, but the Nats' man of the hour—the hour between 4:30 and 5:30 p. m.—was Appleton. The United States Marines, in all of their heroics of the serial movies, never put in a more timely appearance than did Appleton yesterday. Nor did they ever mop up more decisively.

Called into the game in the sixth inning after Pinch Hitter Bobby Estalella's single with the bases full had restored the Nats to a lead for the fourth time in the afternoon—7 to 5—Appleton began to practice his pitching magic on the Yankees and made that lead stand up.

Leonard Pounded

Throughout the early innings the Yankees had pounded Leonard and his knuckle ball. They came from behind in the second inning to tie the score at 1-1. They jolted Leonard loose from two runs in the third inning to tie the score at 3-3, and in the fifth he couldn't hold a 5-3 lead. In five innings they had slugged their three-time conqueror for eight hits.

And then came Appleton. Through the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth innings he didn't give up a run. In the seventh, when the Yankees had the tying runs on base, he threw a fast ball past Joe Gordon to retire the side. In the ninth, after a single by Red Rolfe and a walk to Charley Keller again put the tying runs on base with none out, Appleton was superb.

With the dangerous middle of the Yankee batting order due at the plate, he disposed of Joe DiMaggio on a tame fly ball. With the menacing George Selkirk at bat, he bamboozled the Yankee with a curveball third strike. Joe Gordon he caused to hit a meek grounder to Buddy Lewis and the ball game was over.

Appleton Co-Hero

But Appleton was merely a co-hero of the Nats' ninth triumph in their last ten games. Jimmy Bloodworth, Mickey Vernon and Bobby Estalella sent the 12,000 customers into fits of delight with a slugging display, leading the 12-hit attack on Monte Pearson, Mario Russo and Steve Sundra.

Despite the slugging they unloaded against Pearson—seven hits in the first four innings—the Nats couldn't shake the tenacious Yanks loose until the fifth, which they entered with a 5-to-4 deficit. Then Taft Wright led off with a single to center and Cecil Travis drove a single to right, and Pearson was withdrawn.

In came the left-handed Russo and Bloodworth greeted him with his third straight hit, a hot two-bagger down the third base line that moved Wright across the plate with the tying run and Travis to third. Vernon grounded to Dahlgren, ushering Travis home, and then Ferrell was walked purposely, to fill the bases and bring Leonard to bat.

Scores Winning Run

But Leonard didn't go to bat. Bucky Harris deemed it a spot for a pinch-hitter in the light of the knuckle-baller's ineffectiveness on the mound, and Bobby Estalella got the hitting job. With two strikes against him, Estalella pounded a looping single to short right and the Nats' sixth and seventh runs clattered across the plate.

Back in the first inning the Nats took a 1-0 lead when Lewis walked, went to third on West's single and scored on Wright's grounder, but the Yankees immediately tied the score on Gordon's wind-blown pop fly, which fell safely for two bases, and a single to left by Rosar. A double play started by Travis ex-

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The American League's vital statistics make pleasing reading up Boston way this morning but for the New York Yankees they probably tell an alarming story. If the Yankees can't feel the hot breaths of the pursuing Red Sox on their necks then they're minus one of the five senses.

POVICH

What was once a proud Yankee lead of 11 games has now dwindled to a mere 5½. The Red Sox are staging another rush. But that isn't all of the story. The Yanks are receding and, moreover, they appear to be in something of a panic.

It's probably no comfort to the Yankees, either, that there are still 10 games to be played against the Red Sox. If the pennant race resolves itself into a dog-fight between the Yanks and the Red Sox, that may be too bad for the Yankees, because Joe Cronin's Boston club is not the one to roll over and play dead for the Yankees.

The last time they met, you remember, it was a five-game series at Yankee Stadium, and the chances are you recall what happened. How the Yankees were slapped down by the Red Sox five straight times. The Red Sox have been able to lick the Yanks with great regularity this season. In the 12 games they have played, the Yanks own only four victories.

Griff's Team Aids Cronin

If folks weren't apparently satisfied with baseball's impeccable honesty, they would probably be making some accusations about this 1939 pennant race incidentally. Because Clark Griffith seems to be giving his son-in-law, Cronin, a mighty hand in the attempt to beat down the Yanks. If big league baseball's honesty was not unquestioned, the set-up would, in fact, smack of collusion.

Because the only other team that has even pretended to give the Yankees a stubborn fight this season is Griffith's Washington club. The surprising Nats, in sixth place, have fared no worse than even in 14 games with the Yankees this year. Fifteen of the Yankees' 32 defeats this season have been dealt 'em by those two clubs—the Nats and the Red Sox.

But that isn't all. The Nats have indirectly contributed otherwise to the fight the Yankees have on their hands with the Red Sox. Because Washington has won only one of the ten games it has played with Cronin's outfit. The Nats, who have been plaguing the Yankees all year, have been push-overs for the Red Sox, thus dealing the Yanks a double dose.

Jitter Spree Is On

That the Yanks are a panicky outfit has been fairly obvious during the past three days in Washington. In losing the series opener, 7 to 4, they were guilty of four errors and a passed ball, more misplays than they committed in any other single game this season. In his anxiety to win the second game, and check a three-game losing streak, Manager Joe McCarthy pitched big Charley Ruffing, his ace, out of turn, an almost unheard-of state of affairs on the Yankee pitching staff what with New York hurlers complaining that they don't get enough work.

The Yanks, incidentally, were lucky to win Ruffing's game, and McCarthy was forced to call on another of his starting pitchers, Hildebrand, to relieve Big Red. Save for a weird hop of a double-play grounder, the Yankees might not have emerged from what had been a prolonged batting slump.

Even yesterday, on the day when they finally solved the knuckle ball pitching of Dutch Leonard, they couldn't win. They couldn't win because they only made five runs, and one reason they made only five runs was because McCarthy had to give the badly-overworked Bill Dickey a rest. The Yankees, sans Dickey, are not the same awe-inspiring outfit.

Crosetti, .213; Dahlgren, .231

The fact is that the Yanks are carrying too many weak-sisters in their batting order to present the same formidable front of past years. They not only have lost the power of Gehrig's bat, but they have taken on players who can be pitched to—fellows like Crosetti, Dahlgren, Selkirk and Keller. Selkirk and Keller may have lofty batting averages but they aren't the menacing sluggers that old-time Yanks used to be. They are attempting to carry a .213 hitter in Crosetti and a .231 first baseman in Dahlgren, and they're having a horrible time doing it. Under that load the Yankees may, conceivably crack.

There's cause why the Yanks should be panicky and we do not refer only to the menacing surge of the Red Sox. The Yankees, in fact, must win the penant, or take a terrific financial loss. The Yanks' expenses—the taxes on their vast real estate, their wide-flung farm system, their huge executive personnel, and player pay roll are at least twice as large as those of any other club. The Yankees' profits sustain the entire organization. And the Yanks can show profits only when they win the pennant. New York fans demand a pennant winner. They've been spoiled.

Van Horn Beats Hunt in Rye Tennis; Clinches Cup Berth

By the United Press.

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Welby Van Horn, a tall Willowy High School boy from Los Angeles, virtually clinched a berth on the United States Davis Cup squad today by defeating Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., in the quarterfinals of the Eastern grass courts tennis championships.

Van Horn, 18, and unseeded in the toruney, eliminated Hunt, the Nation's ninth ranking player, 3—6, 6—3, 9—7, and won the right to meet Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., seeded No. 2, in the semi-finals.

Parker also advanced to the semi-finals today along with Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, Wimbledon champion, and Ladislav Hecht, of Czecho-Slovakia.

Alice Marble Wins

The women's semifinalists also were chosen, today's winners being Alice Marble, of Beverley Hills, Calif., Wimbledon and national champion, and Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, in the upper, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, Brookline, Mass., second seeded, and Kay Stammers, of England, ace of the British Wightman Cup team, in the lower bracket.

Riggs was carried to three sets by Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, before winning, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. Grant, fifth seeded, had the defending champion down 2—4 in the third set before Riggs rallied and lifted his game.

Parker had the hardest fight of the day before triumphing over John Hope Doeg of Rumsen, N. J., national champion in 1930, who re-

Australian Cup Team Vanquishes Cubans Twice

By the United Press.

Seabright, Aug. 10.—Whatever possible weakness 'merica's Davis Cup scouts may have been seeking in the play of the Australians was not readily apparent this afternoon. Jack Bromwich and Adrian Quist swept through two straight-set triumphs over Cuba in the American zone final on the courts of the Sea Bright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club.

Although Harry Hopman, the team captain, cautioned his singles stars to play well within themselves because he does not wish the Australians to reach their peak this early in the campaign, Bromwich and Quist were clearly dominant. Bromwich topped fast, alert and determined topped fast, alert and determined Jose Aguero 8—6, 6—0, 6—2, and Quist easily disposed of Strong energetic Ricardo Morales, 6—0, 6—2, 6—3.

Pair of 71s Tie for Lead At Pittsburgh

Spencer and Walper Score 79s, Shorey An 82 as Only 68 Players Break 80

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 10.—Firing one over par 71's Gene Sarazen, gentleman farmer from East Brookfield, Conn., and Denny Shute, slender Huntington, W. Va., pro, shared medalist honors today in the first round of the $10,000 Dapper Dan Open golf tournament.

The hard packed slippery greens at the Wildwood Country Club took a huge toll from a field of the Nation's best golfers. Only 68 of the starting field of 160 finished below 80 and all complained of trouble in making their approaches stick.

Bracketed at 72 in the chase for $2,500 first prize were Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee-on - Delaware, Pa.; Ed Dudley, Philadelphia; Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill.; Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., and Byron Nelson, Reading, Pa., National Open champion and one of the favorites, and Ralph Guldahl, Madison, N. J.

Three professionals from Washington, D. C., were well back of the leaders and in danger of not qualifying for the final rounds with a pair of 79's and an 82. Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam professional, and Leo Walper, driving range owner, scored 39, 40—79 and 38, 41—79, respectively, while Mel Shorey, East Potomac pro, was out in 40 and back in 42 for an 82.

Perry Delvecchio, diminutive sharpshooter from Greensburg, Pa., put together a 73, as did Tony Penna, Dayton, Ohio; Johnny Bulla, Chicago; Babe Wagner, Alliance, Ohio, and Lloyd Mangrum, Los Angeles, Calif.

The rest of the field straggled behind with a dozen bracketed at 74, and about the same at 75. Henry Picard, P. G. A. champion from Hershey, Pa., found a little trouble

Red Sox Win 5th Straight; Beat A's, 7-5

Boston Now but 5½ Games Behind Yanks; All Mack Tallies Result of Homers

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 10.—The Boston Red Sox extended their winning streak to five games today as they came from behind once more to nip the Philadelphia A's, 7 to 5, and sweep the four-game series.

The victory, coupled with a New York Yankee defeat in Washington, left the pennant-hungry Sox only 5½ games behind first place.

All of the A's runs were built on homers. Babe Siebert doubled in the first inning just before Bob Johnson dumped his seventeenth homer of the year into the left-field screen. In the third Frank Hayes smacked his fourteenth into the same spot with two men on base.

Hayes' homer regained the lead for Philadelphia, for the Sox had gone ahead with a three-run burst in the first, but Boston went ahead to stay with another three-run cluster in the sixth.

Ab Jenkins' Speed Trial Postponed

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 10 (AP).—Bad luck forced Ab Jenkins today to postpone again his attempt to boost the world's automobile endurance records.

A combination of an overflow from the oil tank, obscuring the windshield, and the wetness of the salt track led the Utah speed racer to stop his run after two starts. He said he hoped to run again early tomorrow.

319 Nominated for Preakness

Baltimore, Aug. 10 (AP)—The Maryland Jockey Club announced today 319 current 2-year-old thoroughbreds were eligible for the golden jubilee of the running of the $50,000-added Peakness Stakes in 1940.

Eighty-eight racing interests, including most of the county's leading stables, were represented in the nominations. The rich classic for 3-year-olds will be run at Pimlico next May for the fiftieth time since 1873.

W. L. Brann, whose Maryland-bred Challedon won the Preakness this year, has nine eligibles in the list, all of them sired by Challedon's daddy, Challenger II.

William Woodward, owner of Johnstown, the Kentucky Derby winner, named eight, including three sons of Gallant Fox, winner of the 1930 Preakness, and two daughters of Sir Galahad III.

High Quest, holder of the Preakness record of 1:58 1-5 for the 1 3-16 miles distance, was represented by six sons among the nine colts nominated by Brookmeade Stable.

Jim Londos Seeks Marriage License

Los Angeles, Aug. 10 (AP).—Wrestler Jim Londos, 39, and Miss Arva Esther Rochwhite, 27, amateur flyer and daughter of a St. Louis architect, applied today for a marriage license.

They said they would be married in about a month.

Hardy Fans Ignore Broiling Sun to See Griffs Beat Yankees

A new order of bleacher fans is taking over in the open air stands at Griffith stadium—a hardy band of lads who peel off shirts, roll up trousers and ignore a broiling sun all for the sake of cheering the home team on to victory.

Observed at close quarters yesterday as the Nats disposed of a gang of bushwhackers known as the New York Yankees, the bleacher gentlemen displayed a spontaneity that was nothing short of amazing when compared with the efforts of the fellows in cooler recesses of the grand stands.

Happily ensconced in their solarium, the bleacher fans absorbed the sizzling Vitamin D days as if they were so many drops of water. Their comments on the nature of objects of their disapproval seemed to have a certain verve and orig-

El Chico Scores Second Victory at Saratoga Springs Track

Misses Track Record by 1-5 Second

Third Degree Second And No Competition Finishes in Third Position in Feature

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 10.—El Chico, last year's sensation of the 2-year-olds, scored his second success in as many starts at the Saratoga meeting here when he easily outran three rivals in the 6-furlong Canajoharie Purse, an overnight affair for 3-year-olds that held the honored spot on today's program.

The "little guy" from the William Ziegler, jr., barn, which recently scored his first triumph of the year in a mile race, galloped his rivals dizzy to finish in 1:10 3-5, only one-fifth of a second slower than the track record. El Chico himself shares the mark with Jyntee and Polymelian.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Third Degree was a sluggish starting second, three lengths back and two lengths better than Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' No Competition. Russell A. Firestone's Court Counsel, as expected, brought up the rear. El Chico was a 1-to-3 favorite.

Nick Wall was astride the fast stepping son of John P. Grier, which gave the blond lightweight veteran three straight successes on the card. It was two straight for owner Ziegler, who had won the previous event with Our Mat.

It was right here in Saratoga that El Chico, as a yearling, sold for $2,700. He won $84,100 in 1938 and with his meagre earnings of this year added, has garnered a total of $86,050. The undersized chestnut never has been beaten over the SPA strip, his record here being five out of five in two seasons.

El Chico broke first, then came No Competition. And it was a case of No Competition for El Chico thereafter. The favorite kept widening his lead over No Competition until he was five in front at the eighth pole. Third Degree's tardy rally proved no menace.

Horseshoe Champ

Frederick, Md., Aug. 10.—Charles M. Valentine, Emmitsburg farmer, won the county horseshoe pitching championship yesterday by defeating Newell Esterly, Frederick, and William Young, Union Bridge, in the finals.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREEN WATER, $6.70, $4.10, $2.90; GAY BRIDE, $4.50, $3.00; BONNIE HAMPTON (dead heat), $4.60; TULSYRIES STAR (dead heat), $2.20.

GREEN WATER, slow to leave gate, was last until first turn, came with rush through stretch and won going away. GAY BRIDE, step pace throughout, was all out at end. BONNIE HAMPTON forced pace and hung on long enough to get dead heat for third with TULSYRIES STAR. The latter, in tight quarters entering backstretch, came well under punishment. WALLI quit after showing early foot.

EIGHTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 6:15. Off 6:21½. Winner, Mrs. Hewitt's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POVEL, $13.00, $8.30, $6.10; OUR SHIP, $8.00, $5.90; CHATTERDOO, $6.60.

POVEL, a real 3-year-old, was taken in hand for half, then rushed up fast to win in hand. OUR SHIP took command early, bore out at turns, but hung on well when collared. CHATTERDOO, hard hustled throughout, had no excuses. CARTOUR ran an even race. PETRE LAD sulked after going mile and was eased up.

Rockingham Feature to White Sand

Jockey Moore Hurt, Sarouk Destroyed In Third Race

By the Associated Press

Salem, N. H., Aug. 10.—A. C. Taylor's White Sand today won the Hopkinton Purse, a test of a mile and one-sixteenth, which featured the all-claiming card at Rockingham Park.

White Sand, a 5-year-old daughter of St. Germans, led Louis B. Mayer's Bustle by a length at the finish, with Mrs. W. H. Cane's Odessa Frank three lengths further back.

Ridden by Al Shelhamer, White Sand did not settle into her best stride until the race was well along. Bustle sprinted out to an early lead as soon as the start came, with Odessa Frank closest until White Sand started to show her speed.

The mare ran them both down and race to victory in 1:46 2-5. Favored by the crowd of 7,500, she paid $4.80, $3.40 and $2.60. Bustle returned $6.40 and $4.20, and Odessa Frank $4.60.

Jockey George Moore narrowly escaped serious injury and Miss Mable Warner's Sarouk had to be destroyed as the result of an accident in the third race. Sarouk bolted to the fence and tossed Moore into the infield. Then the horse went on a short way only to bolt again, this tim breaking a section of fence and falling into the infield herself. She broke a leg.

Virginia State Golf Tourney September 10

Richmond, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—The first annual State team golf tournament will be played on a Richmond course September 10, Fred J. D. Mackay, secretary of the Virginia State Golf Association, announced today.

Mackey said the tourney to be sponsored by the association and a Richmond newspaper, would be open to any golf club or team in the State regardless of affiliations and that there would be no entry fee.

Three Unearned Runs Help Cubs Defeat Reds and Cut Lead

Derringer Loses 7th Of Season

Frey and Myers Fumble in Pinch; Leiber's Double Scores Two Runs

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 10.—Cincinnati's league leading Reds booted home three unearned runs to help the Chicago Cubs to a 6-4 triumph today in their series final and cut the Reds' first-place margin over the idle St. Louis Cards to seven and one-half games.

LEIBER

Cincinnati won the series, three games to two.

Lonnie Frey's fumble of Bill Nicholson's grounder led to two unearned runs in the sixth inning and Billy Myers' muff of Augie Galan's pop fly in the seventh was another that contributed to Paul Derringer's seventh setback.

It was Vance Page's first successful start since Memorial Day, and although hit hard early, he yielded only two hits in the last four innings, one of them Wally Berger's fourth homer of the series. Billy Herman smashed out a circuit drive in the first inning.

The Reds had tied the game in the third on two singles, a double and a sacrifice fly. They went ahead in the fifth on singles by Myers and Werber sandwiched around a bunt.

Harry Craft, Cincinnati centerfielder who incurred a slight concussion in an outfield collision with Teammate Lee Gamble Tuesday, was discharged from the hospital today and accompanied the Reds to St. Louis tonight. He watched today's game from the stands.

Dodgers, Phils Split; Luke Hamlin Hero

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 10.—Shutout by Brooklyn in the opener 3 to 0 on Luke Hamlin's three-hit hurling, the Phillies crammed seven runs into the sixth inning of today's second game to split their double-header with the Dodgers.

"Hot Potato" Hamlin was as hot as the weather in gaining his second consecutive shutout, never walking a batter and facing only 29 Phillies. The Dodgers themselves got just four hits off bespectacled Walter Beck, but one of these was a homer by Rookie Art Parks in the sixth. A walk and a single brought another run in this inning and in the eighth the Dodgers loaded the bases on an error, two walks and an infield out.

Brooklyn was leading 3 to 1 when the Phillies staged their spree in the nightcap and won, 8 to 3. Joe Marty's triple with the bases loaded and Merrill May's single with three on were the big blows. Rookie Ike Pearson held the Dodgers to five hits in earning his first big league victory.

Bridges Hurls As Tigers Beat White Sox, 4-3

Veteran Hurler Scores 15th Victory, Halting Chicago Rally in 9th

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 10—Tommy Bridges stamped out a ninth-inning rally today and gave up but seven hits as the Detroit Tigers took the third and deciding game of the series with the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 3.

BRIDGES

Bridges, in making up his fifteenth victory of the season, struck out six to bring his strikeout total for the year to 105. He blanked the Sox until the ninth when singles by Jack Hayes and Joe Kuhel produced one run and Gerald Walker's eleventh homer of the season with Kuhel aboard added two more. Bridges, however, tightened up and retired the side.

Detroit put together two singles off Edgar Smith and an error for a run in the third and scored another in the fourth on two singles and an infield out. Two singles and a walk off Smith produced another in the seventh, while the fourth and final run came when relief Pitcher Cline Brown walked Hank Greenberg with the bases loaded.

Nats to Face Red Sox Hex Tomorrow

Fenway Park, Boston, will be the scene of the Nats' next three games—a single battle tomorrow and a double-header on Sunday . . . Some sort of a hex exists over the Nats at Boston, where they have failed to win a game this season . . . Manager Bucky Harris will attempt to break the jinx tomorrow by tossing Joe Krakauskas at the Red Sox . . . "Same old Leonard!" rasped a disgusted fan yesterday as Rolfe doubled in the first inning . . . He was razzing a pitcher who had only beaten the Yankees three times this season chiefly because he had only started against 'em three times . . . The first two Yankee hits off Leonard were wind-blown pop flies that Cecil Travis couldn't reach . . . Jimmy Bloodworth's batting surge has carried his batting average from .246 to .291 . . . Buddy Lewis walked directly from Garfield Hospital into the Nats' line-up yesterday and picked up a pair of average-boosting singles . . . The fielding feature of the game was a collaboration by Mickey Vernon and Leonard on Keller's smash in the fifth inning. Vernon made a fancy pickup of the ball and Leonard took his rifle throw to first base with equal nonchalance . . . It wasn't Leonard's knuckle ball that the Yankees scored against yesterday . . . Dutch discovered that he was wild with his knucklers and virtually abandoned 'em after hitting Crosetti to lead off the third inning.

Giants Score 6 Runs on 7 Hits, Defeat Bees

Boston Collects The Runs in 4th Frame; Simmons Hits Homer

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 10.—Making six runs on seven hits, the New York Giants whipped the Boston Bees, 6 to 3, today to sweep their three-game series and take over fourth place in the National League.

Cliff Melton, going the route for the first time in nearly three weeks, held the Bees to five hits, four of them coming in the fourth inning when Al Simmons' homer, a walk, two singles and a sacrifice brought the Bees all their runs.

The Giants chased Danny Macfayden with a four-run barrage in the first as Mel Ott hit his twenty-second homer with two on and Joe Moore knocked one with none on. Three singles scored a run in the second and Alex Kampouris homered in the sixth.

But not for long. The Yanks reared back at Leonard, who opened the third by hitting Crosetti. With the aid of a wild pitch and singles by Keller and Selkirk, they tied the score at 3-3.

It was Bloodworth and Vernon again for the Nats in the third. With two out, Bloodworth singled to left and Vernon banged a long three-bagger against the wall in right to restore the Nats to a 4-3 advantage. And then in the fifth the Yanks got around to biffing Leonard some more. A single by Rolfe, a walk to Selkirk and Gordon's triple to left put them in a 5-4 lead.

Then happily for the Nats came their big fifth inning, with Estalella in the hero's role. After that, Appleton took care of everything.

Estabrooks In Semifinal At Detroit

Young Iowa Golfer Advances in Western; Beats Miss Randall

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 10.—Edith Estabrooks, 18-year-old Dubuque, Iowa, star, advanced to the semifinals of the thirty-ninth annual closed Western Women's Golf championship today by conquering Harriet Randall, of Indianapolis, 6 and 5, in a quarter-final match.

Four up at the turn, Miss Estabrooks closed out the match by winning the tenth and thirteenth holes. She was 2 under women's par for the Oakland Hills Country Club course when the contest ended.

Mrs. Russell Mann, of Milwaukee, only former champion left in the meet, stayed in the running and earned the right to play Miss Estabrooks tomorrow by conquering Mrs. Tim Lowry, of Chicago, 3 and 2. Mrs. Mann, the former Lucille Robinson, lost the first two holes, but rallied to turn 1 up. Coming in, Mrs. Mann was only 1 over par.

In the lower bracket, Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., continued her brilliant play as she crushed Mrs. Hayes Dansinburg of Minneapolis, 5 and 4. Mrs. Dansingburg won only one hole—the eleventh—where Miss Hicks was trapped and then three-putted for a one over par 6.

In the most dramatic match of the day, Ellamae Williams, 22-year-old Chicagoan, dropped a 35-foot putt on the eighteenth for a win and a one up victory over Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, Tex. Miss Williams had 13 one putt greens and squared the match on the seventeenth by sinking a 12-foot putt for a birdie two.

Land O'Lakes to Play

The Land o' Lakes unlimited baseball team will invade Greenbelt Sunday for a 3 o'clock game with the Greenbelt All-Stars. Team members are requested by Manager Tom Shehade to meet at 1326 Orren street northwest at 11 o'clock Sunday morning.

Welsh Beats Hayes, Enters Tennis Finals

Top-Seeded Player Wins After Close Fight, 9–7, 6–4; Johnsen vs. Lynch

By Jack Munhall.

Samuel P. Hayes, the vacationing Bronxville (N. Y.) school teacher who has been dispensing free tennis lessons in the annual Middle Atlantic States championships at Edgemoor, finally ran across an unwilling pupil yesterday and went the way of all local players.

Hayes met top-seeded Barney Welsh in the semifinal round and despite offering the perennial District titleholder one of his toughest battles of the season he bowed in straight sets, 9—7, 6—4.

In defeat, though, Hayes was something of a hero. With the same peculiar looping forehand that was the Waterloo of Alphonso Smith, Bobby Bensinger and Ray Stocklinski in earlier round matches he had Barney jumping around the court like no local opponent has ever made the king hustle.

Backhand Weak

But in the end it was the same story, for Welsh discovered a flaw in Hayes' unorthodox tennis armor—a weak backhand—and concentrating on this weakness he pulled out a hard-fought victory.

With this victory Welsh stands on the threshold of his second straight championship in this tournament and his second leg on the beautiful Washington Post trophy, which must be won three times for permanent possession.

His final round opponent will be either Davie Johnsen or Hugh Lynch, who battle for that honor at 4 o'clock this afternoon at Edgemoor in an eagerly awaited match. The keen rivals have met twice in tournaments this season and the rivalry stands at one match all. Davie defeated Hugh en route to the City of Washington championship, but Lynch got his revenge in the District, when he overcame a 5—0 deficit in the deciding set.

A semifinal doubles match scheduled yesterday between Lynch and Johnsen and Alphonso Smith and Dick Murphy was postponed when Lynch suffered a slight touch of ptomaine poisoning. It is tentatively rescheduled for 5:30 today.

Welsh Loses Lead

Welsh found it difficult to hold big leads over Hayes in both sets, though he seemed to loaf a little when ahead. Epecially did this appear true in the first set when Barney jumped off to a 3-0 advantage with a display of the typical blasting Welsh placements, but then lackadasically dropped the next four games to trail, 4-3.

Welsh settled down to tie the score at 4-4 but not until Hayes had broken service three times was he able to close out the set. The New Yorker held game leads of 5-4 and 6-5 but was never near a set point, for when points were needed Welsh broke out in a rash of crosscourt forehand placements.

The second set was not so close though it brought out a better brand of tennis from both players. Welsh was banging shots to Hayes' back hand at every opportunity now and usually he forced errors. With this style of attack Barney won four straight games after dropping the opener to Hayes' service and never trailed. Hayes managed a brief rally when the score favored Welsh at 5-2 but after fighting off three match points he lost the decisive point to an overhead placement.

Today's Schedule

turned to bog time competition this season after an absence of seven years. Parker finally beath the hard-serving southpaw, 5—7, 7—5, 13—11, after Doeg had him at match point four times in the final set. Doeg tired because of the heat and blistering pace.

Hecht Beats Prusoff

While Alice Marble and Mrs. Fayban were advancing in the women's singles, two other seeded American girls were eliminated. Dorothy Bundy of Santa Monica, Cal., No. 3, lost to Kay Stammers, 10—8, 0—6, 8—6, and Dorothy Workman of Los Angeles, No. 4, bowed to Mms. Rene Mathieu, French veteran, 3—6, 7—5, 6—1.

Miss Marble won with ease over the newcomer, Mary Arnold of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—1, and Mrs. Fayban put out the British Wightman cupper, Mrs. S. H. Hammersley, 6—3, 7—5.

Only one men's semi-final will be staged tomorrow—Parker vs. Van Horn—but both women's semi-finals will be played.

Only requisite for entrance into this comfort-loving group—barring the slight assessment Owner Clark Griffith insists upon—is that you find a seat and perform a modified strip tease in a minimum of time.

To walk among these bronzed editions of Tarzan with your shirt on is to incite an undercurrent of mutterings, but with coat and shirt you get cold, fish-eyed stares.

Approximately half of the crowd of 350 in the bleachers yesterday was in some form of undress. Several more far-sighted comfort-seekers even removed shoes and doubtless went home with same badly sunburned.

Approached for a comment on this situation, nearby bleacher officials had little else to say than, "um." In fact, some officials were located up in the bleachers near the game's end with shirts on the seat beside them.

Palisades Girls Sweep First Recreation 'Play-Day'

Winners Run Up Total of 78 Points Against Four Other Playgrounds Teams

Competing against teams from four other playgrounds—Twin Oaks, Edgewood, Langdon and New York Avenue—the Palisades girls ran up a total of 78 points in the four-hour contests. Langdon was second with 49, and Twin Oaks third with 46.

The idea of the entire business was to eliminate the quibbling that usually followed the track and field meets held in previous years and to give the girls a chance to show a little more team work in such things as softball, badminton, shuffleboard, volleyball, table tennis, archery, newcomb, paddle tennis, tennis and points West.

Girl athletes ranging from 3-year-olds in pigtails to 16-year-olds—more than 140 of them—turned out for the play-day, held at Palisades because of the variety of events it is equipped to stage. The Palisades girls immediately took the upper hand by beating every other team in softball and dominating the other events.

The Becker twins, Dottie and Margaret, led the volleyball team to victory, while Miss Oakley led the way in tennis and badminton. The only city playground equipped with archery range, Palisades had no trouble there. Mrs. Mary Rountree, director at Palisades, presided over a lemonade barrel at te lunch hour as competition adjourned to picnic tables.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

Pete Appleton and Jimmy Bloodworth were the stand-out performers in the 7-5 victory over the Yankees yesterday and drew down the chief awards in the Nats' Man of the Month contest. Points were distributed on the basis of yesterday's game as follows:

To Appleton, four points, because he abruptly checked the Yankees' slugging by pitching three-hit ball in a four-inning relief shift and because he pitched magnificently with the tying runs on base in the seventh and ninth.

To Bloodworth, three points, because his three straight hits in the first five innings figured in all of the Nats' first five runs.

To Jimmy Vernon, two points, because he twice drove in a run with extra base hits, and played a brilliant game in the field.

To Bobby Estalella, one point, because he singled with the bases full as a pinch hitter in the fifth to drive home what proved to be the winning runs. The totals:

Buddy Lewis	11	Mickey Vernon	5
Jimmy Bloodworth	13	Charley Gelbert	3
Dutch Leonard	11	Rick Ferrell	3
George Case	7	Joe Krakauskas	3
Sammy West	7	Joe Haynes	3
Pete Appleton	7	Bobby Estalella	3
Ken Chase	6	Cecil Travis	3

Bill Ackerman's Column — On Fishing

ACKERMAN

With no rain between now and Sunday, the bass fisherman should be able to use lures with more than a fair chance of success. On Wednesday the Potomac at Joe Fletcher's was clearing fast, while many creeks above were already running clear.

An 8-pound smallmouth bass isn't a record fish, as all-time records go, but in this section one so large isn't caught in a score of years. Yet this is just what Walter Wyatt was lucky enough to hang in to, fishing down in Virginia waters several weeks ago. What's more, he landed it.

The first thought of most anglers is, that it is probably a largemouth, but Larry Williams, who certainly knows his scales if anyone does, says it is a smallmouth.

There is no doubt but what the run of seatrout is well on its way, for some really swell catches have been noted, particularly by boats fishing the Eastern Shore. Boats out of Ridge have been getting them under Hoopers Island as well as on the Middles; big hardheads, an occasional channel bass and one catch of blues. Capt. Tippett has been seeing small scattered schools of blues for several weeks. Whether they are traveling or feeding is more than we can say. The fact that they are here is something, and, like other species, will start striking at the usual time, which on the Middles is sometime during the last ten days in August.

Stripers are working the southern Maryland shore now. Scattered catches are being reported from Point Lookout up to Thomas' Point; off the black can below West River; on the outer edge of Holland Point Bar in Herring Bay; at Point No Point just inside the steamboat channel; up the Patuxent and at Breezy Point. From the latter place, comes the first report of rock this year. Capt. Hobart Harrison caught 24 trolling that weighed from 2 to 5 pounds.

Ray Adams has been sticking to chuming with green shrimp and floating soft crabs, and without success up until last week, when he got into a school of big ones. Fifty-four, none under 7 pounds and up to 11, and now he's sold on the idea that they are real sport without any lead. We think stripers that size are something on the end of a line, no matter how much lead is being used.

Here's a thought for those anglers who haven't been having too much success with baiting with chum ahrimp. Ray raised them with the chum and baited with small soft crabs.

At Oregon Inlet, and along the North Carolina coast, the big channel bass are running again. Big stripers are running the beaches and a few small blues and small stripers are being caught inside trolling.

This also is the time of year that the small school tuna, dolphin and albacore are offshore. We haven't had a report of any being taken, but that isn't unusual, because the boatmen only fish them when their parties ask for it.

There are plenty of the big game fish off the Jersey coast—a 450-pound broadbill swordfish was caught by Dan Stebbins, of Atlantic City. The run of tuna is exceptional, several white marlin have been taken and the albacore and bluefish schools are drawing more than a small share of anglers.

At Cape Charles the fishing isn't as good as might be looked for at this time of the year. The run of cobia has carried off highest honors so far; and now the fall run of channel bass is getting under way.

W. E. Stanley is just back from several days fishing with Capt. Lawson Crockett and his count was six channel bass, the largest weighing 51¼ pounds, on the first day, while a small cobia was the sum total of the second.

Stanley has fallen hard for the new 20-pound test Nylon line he was using for the first time, just as so many others have who have been lucky enough to get in on the limited supply on the market this summer.

Just hard enough for easy casting, water-proofed, it is so elastic it is surprising. Ashaway, manufacturing it from Dupont Nylon yarn, and putting it on the market under their name, claim an elasticity of from 14 to 16 per cent. We feel it will be a must in every angler's kit within another year. So far our personal use of this line has been with a Tycoon 4-ounce tip which we believe will come under 4-8 specifications, and so far have found nothing to indicate it isn't a wonderfully balanced outfit.

The Miami Beach Rod and Reel Club has one of those gamest fish contests on this summer, and Don McCarthy is in receipt of one letter which seems to leave some doubt as to whether it is for one fish or all fish. Writes Phil Wylie (just in case you have forgotten, he is the author of several fine fishing yarns that have been running in the Saturday Evening Post this summer; and a real angler)—". . . If I had more time I'd do my best to put a quietus on this . . . 'gamest fish' argument. There are two things to say, in my humble opinion. One is that the gameness of any given individual fish depends on how he feels that day and who he is—the bully or the tissy of the school. The other is that there can be no doubt at all in the mind of the abstract thinker that the white marlin, ounce for ounce, can disembowel any other living fish with one fin and thumb his bill with the other. In an issue of the Sativpost next month I will be seen to praise the bonefish. This is mostly heresay. I have caught a few of these glorified carp, weighing up to eight pounds, on casting tackle, and, in my opinion, any fast pelagic blue water fish is far tougher than the bonefish. Let the seasick and feebie simmer in their beards as they may, I believe an eight pound mackerel tied tail to tail to an eight-pound bonefish could drag the latter backwards fast enough to drown him."

Agrees With Rating

We agree with his rating of the white marlin all right, but no matter what we might think we're not saying much about the White Fox of the grass banks, for as Phil says, there is bound to be some simmering in the beards—particularly in those of some of his club buddies.

At Ocean City on Tuesday, fishing with Capt. Levi Raymond on the Lev-Lou, Dr. Bill Wilkins, of Alexandria, using 6-9 tackle caught two white marlin weighing 80 and 65 pounds. He had another on for over 2 hours that was estimated to weigh close to a 100.

A bonefisherman on the mari flats around Marathon in the winter and down on the Maryland shore every chance he gets to steal away during the summer, we wonder what Bill might have to say about such a belief.

John Freeman and Dr. T. Rutkowski fishing with Capt. Red Hall on the Cutty Sark the same day brought three to boat. They weighed 63, 48 and 47 pounds—the first landed with a broken rod in 48 minutes.

Capt. Vic Lahce had a fish weighing an even 100 pounds. This is the tenth fish we know of, to go over the century mark.

Nanjo Singh Disqualified In Mat Feature

Golden Terror Wins As 1,800 Disapprove Of Referee's Decision

Ringside chairs were turned into kindling wood last night at Turner's arena in the regular weekly "riot" which followed disqualification of Nanjo Singh for his ungentlemanly tactics with the [illegible] in the 90-minute feature match.

Nanjo, coming out of Row A, clamped his cobra clutch on The Terror but in his delerium forgot to step inside the ring. Referee Casey Berger tried to coax him inside, failed and then awarded the match to The Terror. A storm of disapproval broke at this and some 1,800 fans sought to climb into the ring and seek vengance on Berger, The Terror or anybody else who happened to be around.

Singh's disqualification came after 19 minutes of experimenting on the 303-pound hulk of The Terror. In the semifinal, Jack Hader bounced Chief Chewaki on the floor in 10 minutes and finished him with a crab hold.

Red Ryan beat Ernie Powers in 18½ minutes, Rudy Strongberg and Raoul Lopez drew, and Bibber McCoy beat Juan Ologuival in 14 minutes in the preliminary waltz routines.

4 Recreation Teams in Title Play Today

Stoddert and Van Buren reached the senior finals, and Virginia avenue and Powell the junior finals yesterday in the D. C. Recreation Department's elimination softball tournament.

The title games will be played at 2 o'clock this afternoon, the senior contest on Diamond No. 9 and the junior on Diamond No. 10 at the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool.

In yesterday's senior games Stoddert defeated Powell, 8-3, and Van Buren beat Langley, 2-1. In the junior division Powell defeated Park View, 6-5, when "Ruby" Rubin made a wild pitch in the eleventh inning, and Virginia Avenue outslugged Van Buren, 12-11.

Featuring the last-named game was a home run with the bases loaded by McGowan, of the winners, in the seventh inning when Virginia Avenue scored six runs to tie the score.

Andes turned in the best pitching job of the day as he held down Langley with five hits for Van Buren. Harrell, of the losers, also allowed only five hits. Van Buren executed a triple play in the third inning.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 10.—The mystic connection between owner and servant, in the sports business, has been borne out once again.

Sam Riddle was dying of general spring-running-down when his War Admiral won the Chesapeake and went on to win the Derby. Two nights ago the old man bought five yearlings at Saratoga, building for the future.

CONSIDINE

Jake Ruppert lived on, his closest friends believe, because he didn't want to miss hearing and reading about the Yankees' third straight pennant.

Now come Dr. Lowry M. Guilinger, owner of Peter Astra, the colt that won the Hambletonian here yesterday. And another such miracle.

Last July, Dr. Guilinger was lying in a hospital bed in Cleveland, waiting to be taken to the operating room. The 70-year-old country doctor was facing a grave piece of surgery and there was no real assurance that he would survive the fancy carving. Not too long before he was to be wheeled downstairs to the cutlery nook, he got a wire from his old friend, Dr. Hugh M. Parshall, saying that Parshall had decided to start Peter Astra in the Rainy Day Stake, at North Randall, just outside of Cleveland.

Peter Astra Finally Ready

The message meant a lot to the old man. It meant that Peter Astra, for whom he had spent $3,250 as a yearling (about all the money he had), had safely come through that arduous apprenticeship that is the lot of trotters—who must be taught their unnatural gait by means of hampering harnesses, trial and error, and by means of a species of patience which would turn the Biblical Job into a hair-pulling maniac. Parshall had schooled the young colt through the winter, taken him to the graduation course at Pinehurst and now he was ready to let him go.

Dr. Guilinger wasn't going to stay in bed with that sort of thing happening, so he rang for his nurse, barked for his clothes, put them on and stomped out of the hospital—deaf to the cries of several doctors that he'd die before he hit the first corner.

He was still around yesterday, a chipper little gray-haired man possessed of the pert dignity that is the cloak of country doctors. His lined face bore the imprint of 40 years of small town doctoring, of carriage rides through the night and—more recently—dashes by automobile to young sufferers from colic and old rheumatics. He has the same homely air of Dr. Dafoe, much of the Doc's dry humor, and his chief thought when they handed him the Hambletonian Cup, in front of 30,000 yelling country jakes and city slickers, was whether or not it would fit on the family mantelpiece, back in Andover, Ohio.

Little Champ Unbeaten in 1939

Peter Astra started the Doc on his borrowed time in July, 1938, the day he won the Rainy Day Stake. To that he added the Harriman Cup, Review Futurity and Horseman Stake. And he was second in the American Stake, Good Time Stake and June Kentucky Futurity—all of these names striking responsive chords in the hearts of millions of small-town sports fans who follow the harness game as avidly as the urbanites follow thoroughbreds.

This year Peter Astra hasn't lost a heat. He won the Matron, the Historic, the National and the American in straight heats. He is a little fellow, with legs as spindly as an Otto Soglow horse. But like other good trotters, he can go at top speed in as many as four or five 1-mile races during a single afternoon, dragging a 190-pound driver, a 27-pound sulky and 13 pounds of harness. That would kill a Johnstown.

The Doc would be a rich man if he ever got around to collecting his bills, but he's shy about things like that. Won't even send a bill, and so he has had the slim pickings what are the fate of his gentle kind. The one luxury of his life was Peter Astra, whom he couldn't resist when they trotted the youngster out to the sales ring in the Old Glory sales.

A few days ago an Italian syndicate offered him $37,500 for Peter Astra. It was more money than the Doc ever saw, or ever will. But he shook his head. He didn't want Peter Astra to leave the country, even though it's not unusual for owners of Hambletonian winners to sell them abroad. The Doc thinks that in Peter Astra's veins flows the finest trotting blood in the world.

Heurich Beats Old Milwaukee For Loop Title

Pepco Barry's eighth-inning single yesterday drove in the tying and winning runs, gave the Heurich Brewers a 5-to-4 victory over Old Milwaukee and clinched the second half flag of the Industrial League. Heurich also won the first half.

In addition to his game-winning single, Barry made two other hits, one a triple, drove in another run and scored once himself.

Cooper, Jenkins and Forney, occupying the first three positions in the Old Milwaukee line-up, made six hits between them.

Otto Greiner, McCarthy Win In Eastern

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Morton McCarthy, of Richmond, Va., was credited with one of the first upsets in the Eastern Amateur Golf Championship today, as he eliminated Chick Harbert, of Battle Creek, Mich., one of the favorites in the second round of match play.

McCarthy won the match on the last hole after a nip-and-tuck battle, which was in doubt until the final putt dropped.

Both had good drives on the 329-yard home hole, but McCarthy clinched the match with a par 4 as Harbert's putter failed in the crisis.

In the morning round McCarthy eliminated Howard Tryon, of Miami, Fla., 6 and 5. McCarthy meets Arthur Cranfield, of Syracuse, in the third round tomorrow.

Otto Greiner, of Baltimore, remained in the running by defeating Jack Harper, State College, Pa., 8 and 7, and then downing Bus Drexilius, of Buffalo, 4 and 3. He meets Jimmy Scott, of Louisville, Ky., runner-up for the medal tomorrow.

Favorites Win Colored Tennis

Favorites advanced yesterday as the District Colored Playground tennis championships reached the semifinal round at the Banneker Playground courts.

Defending Champion Andres Wheatley defeated Ptolemy Corbiere of Howard University, 6—3, 6—4. Leroy Millender, last year's finalist, defeated Sidat Singh, of Syracuse University football fame, 6—4, 6—2, and Maurice "Flip" Jackson, Howard U's southpaw sensation, whipped Dudley Woodward, winner of the recent Mall tournament, 9—7, 6—3.

In the women's division Dorothy Morgan defeated Jean Valentine, 6—3, 6—4, and Florence Barnes won from Miss Stratton, 6—2, 6—3.

Smith's No-Hit Game Wins for Roosevelt

With "Wild Jack" Smith pitching a no-hit game in his D. C. Recreation Softball League debut, Roosevelt Boys Club defeated Bureau of Standards 8-2, yesterday at Roosevelt Stadium. Smith walked 10 and fanned a like number.

New Insurance In D. C. Up 8% In Six Months

Life Writings Total $32,052,000 With January in Van

By Thomas M. Cahill.

In writing new life insurance amounting to $32,052,000 in the first six months of 1939, local agents made a gain of 8 per cent over the first half of 1938, when business totaled $29,736,000. Noting business by months, it is revealed that the January total of more than $7,000,000 was the highest figure reached in any of the six months, new business in June being the nearest approach to it, with March a close third.

January's total was due partly to a change in policy rates, many clients signing for new insurance under old policy plans. The same situation made last December an especially good month. The June mark was reached under normal conditions and favorable volume of business in the other months also was attained under similar conditions.

January, $7,183,000, 47% increase; February, $4,628,000, 3% increase; March, $5,240,000; April, $4,684,000, 7% decrease; May, $4,836,000, 7% decrease; June, $5,481,000, 12% increase; total, $32,052,000, 8% increase.

In the same period Virginia agents wrote a total of $44,549,000 in new life insurance, a gain of 9 per cent, and Maryland reported a half-year total of $49,002,000, an increase over 1938 of 8 per cent.

Bankers Pension Plans

Francis G. Addison, jr., president of Security Savings & Commercial Bank of this city; Norman T. Hayes, vice president, Philadelphia National Bank, and Millard F. Jones, executive vice president of Planters National Bank & Trust Co., Rocky Mount, N. C., are studying various types of pension insurance plans for bank employes on attaining retirement age.

Appointed earlier this year by President Philip A. Benson of the American Bankers' Association the three bankers are working on different methods of securing availability of a single insurance plan for staff employes, and one which banks in all States may adopt. Devising such a plan was urged by the association's State secretaries section at Houston last fall and authorized by its executive council this spring. Results will be presented at the Seattle convention in September.

Charles I. Haycraft, leading salesman of the DeForce agency of Continental American Life Insurance Co., has left for Ocean City, Md., on a fishing trip as a reward for being one of seven leading producers of the company for July.

Personal Notes

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York City was accompanied on his airplane trip yesterday by O. M. Mosier, vice president of American Airlines, Inc., who made arrangements for the flight.

President Robert V. Fleming of Riggs National Bank has been making week-end trips to his summer home at Rehoboth Beach, Del. He will attend the convention of the American Bankers Association, at Seattle, in September, being a past president of that organization.

Eliot H. Thompson, publicity manager of Washington Loan & Trust Co., is spending two weeks at Epping Forest, the Severn River community which he helped establish.

Secretary Frederick P. H. Siddons of American Security & Trust Co. is at his office following a month's vacation at his summer home at Haven, Me.

President John A. Reilly of Second National Bank has been visiting at Miami Beach, Fla. Vice President Julius E. Loh, of that institution, has returned from a month's outing.

President Harry G. Meem of Washington Loan & Trust Co. will visit Denver, Colo., and take a Western tour.

Members of the United States Gypsum Co. will hold a meeting and luncheon at Hay-Adams House tomorrow.

Canada Dry Votes 50-Cent Dividend

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Directors of Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., today declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on common stock, payable September 15 to holders of record September 1. Previous payment was 25 cents a share in September last year, the only disbursement in 1938.

'Lone Wolf' Sinclair Slashes Crude Oil Price, Waits Reaction

Step Follows Failure Of Drive to Boost Gasoline Prices

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Two-fisted, 63-year-old Harrry F. Sinclair, chairman of the executive committee of Consolidated Oil Corporation, chewed a blunt cigar in the "front office" of the company here today, and awaited reaction of competitors to his sudden, overnight flat reduction of 20 cents a barrel in all grades of crude oil in the mid-continent area.

Poker-faced Sinclair, known as the "Lone Wolf" of the oil game ever since the turn of the century when, as a clerk in his father's drug store at Independence, Kan., he began buying up oil leases, had given the industry plenty of warning of what he was going to do.

At the last annual meeting of stockholders he said either prices of gasoline and other refined products had to go up, or crude prices had to go down.

Mark-Up Was Failure

In June this year he boosted the company's gasoline prices a cent a gallon in 42 States, and spent thousands of dollars for newspaper advertisements announcing the rise, and explaining the oil industry had to get more for its gasoline if it was going to operate profitably. Only a part of competitive marketers raised prices along with Sinclair, however, and the mark-up was only about 50 per cent effective.

The Sinclair campaign to boost gasoline prices collapsed because competitors wouldn't follow the rises.

Last night Consolidated Oil sent out its report for the first six months of 1939, showing a net loss of over $872,000 for the period, contrasted with net profits of more than $4,000,000 in the like half of 1938.

And just an hour or so after the report was mailed to stockholders, Sinclair slashed 20 cents from the company's crude prices. The reductions battered 36 gravity crude in Oklahoma and Kansas to 82 cents a barrel, the first time oil had been under $1 since 1934.

Sales Heavy, Profits Down

Palming his bald head, Sinclair graphically states his case. Gasoline consumption is the highest on record. Crude oil production also is the highest on record. Yet the oil industry is losing money in the home market.

Why didn't the other big oil companies go along with Sinclair when he tried to raise gasoline prices in June?

1. Standard Oil of New Jersey, Gulf Oil, Shell, and many other big producers enjoy a fat export trade.

On the other hand, Sinclair's big market is in the United States, with export business secondary.

2. Many of Sinclair's competitors have producing fields in Illinois, where there is no State conservation department and no proration of output, and production runs "wide open." Sinclair has no Illinois fields.

Drop Not Anticipated

Executives say that if other major producers cut crude oil prices to match Sinclair's, it isn't likely lower gasoline prices will follow, for current gasoline prices are said already to have been lowered in anticipation of cheaper crude quotations.

Executives of Standard Oil of New Jersey, Gulf Oil, Shell and other big oil companies here said today decision on whether they would match Sinclair's crude oil cut was being left to their marketing executives in mid-continent areas.

D. C. Trade Index Reported Steady, 97% of Normal

Business conditions in Washington as of August 1 showed no change from the index for July 1, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas by Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., national advertising concern.

As of August 1 the D. C. business index stood at 3 per cent below normal, the same as for July 1. On August 1, 1938, the city's business index stood at 8 per cent below normal.

"July business conditions rose in 51 areas," the report states, "and in 26 others they held to the level of the previous month. Decreases were registered in the remaining 70 areas although in many cases the declines were nominal."

Cotton Weakens On War Clouds, Tropical Storm

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—European war scares blew over the cotton futures market today, keeping buyers and sellers equally restless. After a minor foray upward, the market relapsed to a closing range of unchanged to 2 points lower.

Exports today, 13,611 bales; season so far, 62,146; port receipts, 10,473; port stocks, 1,971,525.

Cottonseed Oil

Heavy liquidation which got under way early in the week has carried the market roughly 40 points lower.

Sales Relax, Wheat Prices Turn Buoyant

September Up 1½ Before Reaction In Late Trade

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 10.—The wheat market scored its first advance in a week here today, prices gaining as much as 1½ cents a bushel at times. Trade was light, however, and best levels were not maintained.

Lack of selling pressure and renewal of uncertainty over the European political situation gave the market a strong tone after a narrow trade early in the session. September contracts reached 65 cents, up 1½ from the previous close, and December and May gained 1⅜ before a reaction occurred.

Wheat on the Board of Trade closed ½ to a cent higher; September 64⅜@64½; December, 64⅝@64¾. Corn ⅛@⅜ up; September, 42⅜@42½; December, 41⅞@42. Oats, ⅛@⅜ up. Soy beans, ¼@½ up. Rye, ⅛ off to ⅛ up. Lard, 8 to 15 cents lower.

Corn ruled firm in sympathy with wheat, but maximum gains were held to about ½ cent. Foreign demand for the grain was dull. Because of recent crop deterioration reports from outlying districts of the domestic corn belt the Government's summary was awaited with unusual interest.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 10.—A moderate improvement occurred in late stock market dealings today but there were still many losers at the finish. Turnover continued limited by foreign political considerations. Coppers firmed following a boost in the cartel quota and rubbers again resisted the main trend. Domestic rails declined pending outcome of wage negotiations, while heavy industrial shares were chipped down narrowly. Transatlantics lost fractions to a point or so. British funds eased up after a lower opening.

Paris.—Bourse prices failed again today to develop definite trend. The market seemed indifferent to the approaching speech of Danzig Leader Foerster. Rentes ended 20 centimes lower to 45 higher, while most industrials remained at overnight levels.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures gained ⅛ to ¼ penny today following a hesitant opening. Support came through covering orders and some miller buying. Firmness at Bombay and slightly bullish crop advices from the United States prompted buying of cotton futures. Closing prices were 3 points lower to 4 higher.

Stocks Continue Sag in Light Trading As Foreign Clouds Overshadow Silver Lining in Domestic Trade News

New York, Aug. 10.—The stock market continued to sag in the summer doldrums and the cause today was the familiar one of the possibility of trouble abroad. For more than three weeks the market has held to a comparatively narrow range.

At the moment business is far from booming, but it is climbing. Representative indices show a continuation of the rise and current news includes the reports of higher loadings by leading railroads, a good level in power production and higher store sales. But unfortunately it is not business which is shaping the present trend of prices on the exchange. It is the fear of war and yesterday there was the definite nervousness over the speech made by Albert Forster, Nazi leader, in Danzig. After the close, when excerpts from the speech had been digested, it was felt that nothing had been lost, as the tone of the speech was defensive.

Previous Rise Erased

A break of 0.73 point in the composite average today on a volume of 699,830 shares eliminated the mark-up of the period of the neutrality discussion of a few weeks ago.

The following table shows what has happened to the index figures of various groups of stocks used in the New York Herald Tribune's average. Listed are the figures for July 15, the high on the mark-up after July 17 and yesterday's low.

	Close July 15.	High after mark-up	July 17 Aug. 10	Low Aug. 10

Secondary Trend Hit

According to the Dow theory, the primary trend of the stock market is upward but we are now experiencing a secondary trend which is downward. The list has now lost about one-third of the gain that was made between the low of April and the high of August 3.

The gain in this period, according to the Herald Tribune composite average, was 8.79 points and the loss to yesterday's low was 2.81 points or 32 per cent. According to the Dow theory, secondary reactions usually run 1-3 to 2-3 of the previous movement. One-third would carry the composite to 102.32, compared with yesterday's close of 102.59, and two-thirds would carry it to 99.39.

The heaviest trading of recent weeks came on the mark-up of the week ended July 22 Volume had been declining steadily during June and for the first two weeks of July. On July 3 sales were only 235,140 shares, making it the smallest day since 1922. In the surprising mark-up of Monday, July 17, the volume jumped to 1,751,700 and on the day following to 1,887,670. Then volume contracted with prices making little headway and so far this week has averaged only 533,000 shares a day, with the heaviest today in a declining market.

All Grades Decline

All groups contributed to the loss yesterday with steels, metals, oils and motors particularly prominent. Losses of around 1 to 2 points were sustained by Telephone, Chrysler, Du Pont, Motors, Manville, Sears, Jersey, Carbide and Steel.

Among the commodities the wheat market made its first advance of the week on short covering pending European developments. The close was up ½ to 1 cent a bushel. Cotton lost an early gain but held within a narrow range. Closing unchanged to 2 points lower.

Bonds Are Lower

Listed bonds moved lower today. The relatively mild speech at Danzig by Hitler's lieutenant, Albert Foerster, came after the close and thus failed to affect the trend. Foreign dollar bonds were marked steadily lower, and smaller losses appeared in domestic issues. Both investment and speculative issues were affected. Turnover was $4,700,000.

Polish, German and Italian bonds were under pressure on the reports of European developments, but sales were not numerous and the recessions ranged to 3 points.

United States Treasury issues moved lower by small fractions in the formal trading, but in the late counter dealings the losses were modified, as the speech by Herr Foerster proved much less alarming than the advance indications. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were marked down by small fractions.

Foreign Copper Cartel Boosts Output Quota

London, Aug. 10 (AP).—The international copper cartel of producers outside the United States announced today output quotas would be increased, effective August 16, to 105 per cent of the basic tonnages settled upon at the time of formation of the cartel several years ago. The present quotas are 95 per cent of basic tonnages.

The action reflected the sharp summer improvement in the world's metal markets, first marked by large French and Japanese copper purchases in the United States and German buying in England, cutting heavily into visible stores.

U. S. Buys 25,500 Steel Grain Bins

The Agriculture Department awarded contracts yesterday for 25,500 steel grain bins at a total cost of $3,611,520. The bins will be used to store 43,280,000 bushels of surplus corn in rural sections of the midwestern corn belt.

Farmers are expected to turn over the grain to the Government in settlement of loans made on corn in 1937 and 1938.

The bins, ranging from 1,000 to 2,000 bushels in capacity, will cost an average of about 9½ cents per bushel of storage capacity.

U. S. Oil Supply Reduced in June

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines yesterday reported the June total supply of all oils at 556,559,000 barrels, or 142 days' supply, as compared with 558,984,000 barrels in May and 583,570,000 in June last year.

Whereas stocks increased 245,000 barrels in May, they declined 2,425,000 in June; this, officials said, was due principally to the fact that nearly 5,000,000 barrels were withdrawn for the market during June as compared with a small withdrawal in May.

June stocks of motor fuel amounted to 81,144,000 barrels compared with 84,554,000 in May and 80,676,000 the previous June. Domestic motor fuel demand totaled 49,812,000 barrels or 3 per cent more than last year.

Steel Shipments Decline in June

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—July shipments of finished steel products by U. S. Steel Corp. subsidiaries totaled 676,309 tons, a decrease of 57,124 from 733,433 in the preceding month and 234,739 ahead of 441,570 in July last year.

July shipments were the smallest since February, when 677,994 tons were shipped.

Total shipments for the first seven months of the year were 5,069,575 tons, compared with 3,451,924 in the comparable 1938 period.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Attractive Mrs. Lee Hazen proved she was more than a model of pulchritude in the subtle ruse she used to mislead the defenders. Miss Ruth Sherman and Oswald Jacoby, in today's hand. It occurred during the mixed team-of-four championship, and Mrs. Hazen won her contract of two spades doubled, giving her game, by leading the very suit she feared the opponents would play, to throw them off the track. As declarer's aims are rarely those of the defense, a suit played by declarer is usually safe from attack. On this principle Mrs. Hazen based her coup. Mr. Hazen was her partner. The bidding, which led her into the contract at which she should have been defeated one trick, is shown, along with the cards, in today's box.

In the play Miss Sherman led the deuce of hearts, which, after Mr. Jacoby had put up the queen, Mrs. Hazen took with the ace. She next cleared the king and queen of diamonds from dummy in preparation for a ruff, but realizing that any attempt to regain her hand would risk a trump shift by the adversaries, which would kill the ruff, she decided on the daring course of leading trumps herself.

Miss Sherman, deceived by the bluff, won the first trump lead and continued hearts. The defense then won two hearts and played two rounds of clubs, but Mrs. Hazen trumped the second club and ruffed a diamond in dummy, to win her contract. She lost only two spades, two hearts and a club.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Frank E. Reppert, 70, retiring chief of the Treasury's currency redemption division, walked into a surprise party yesterday when he went to work for the last day of his 40-year service in the Government.

Reppert was greeted by more than 100 of his associates in the department, including Treasurer Julian, chiefs of the Treasury divisions, and members of his own staff. With the "goodbye's" of his friends, Reppert received a travelling bag, a pocketbook, and a $50 bill.

He said he planned to start today, with Mrs. Reppert, and the farewell presents, for a three-month tour to West Coast. He will visit Valley Falls, Kans., his birthplace, and Kansas City, where he worked as bookkeeper in a packing house before entering Government service.

Reppert entered the Treasury Department in February 1899. In 1918 he became chief of the old United States Currency Redemption division, and continued as chief when the United States Currency and National Bank redemption agencies were merged in 1936. He lives at 6300 Sixth street Northwest.

ALL FORMER members of the famous Forty-second (Rainbow) Division, A. E. F., now residing in the District of Columbia or adjacent areas, are invited to an outing sponsored by the District of Columbia Chapter, Rainbow Division Veterans, on Saturday, August 26, at the summer estate of Dr. Albert M. Kloczewski, Herald Harbor, Md. Families and friends are to be included. Refreshments will be on the Dutch treat basis, according to Chairman Bernard V. Rhodes.

RETIREMENTS recently from the Government Printing Office were: George M. Williams, 1060 Westford place, Deanwood northeast, unskilled laborer, 28 years; Frederick M. Werneke, 811 L street northwest, record referee, 37 years; James R. Johnson, 921 L street northeast, proofreader, 26 years; Harry H. Geisbert, 2123 north Fulton avenue, Baltimore, compositor, 24 years.

GOODBYES from the Agricultural Department: Adam C. Boving, senior entomologist, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, who had served 26 years, and Furman L. Mulford, associate horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry, Beltsville, who had served 28 years.

EVERETT G. HOLT, chief of the Leather and Rubber Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will tell the members of the Washington Round Table about "This Business of Rubber" at the regular weekly luncheon today (Friday). The luncheon, which will begin at 12:30 p. m., will be held at the National Press Club.

"MISS INTERIOR, 1940," the beauty queen of the Interior Department, will be chosen at the annual field day and outing of the Interior Department Recreation Association at Fort Hunt, Va., Saturday, August 26.

A game of bicycle polo and a softball game between the IDRA Varsity and the National Park Service Team will be featured. In addition, according to Edward J. Kelly, president of the IDRA, there will be horseshoe pitching, badminton, pistol shooting, foot races and swimming.

Joseph H. Shollenberger will leave his job as senior agricultural economist with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, for the Northern Regional Research Laboratory at Peoria, Ill., where he will head the commodity development division.

He will seek the co-operation of State and Federal bureaus in studying the effect of environmental and varietal differences of corn and wheat on their industrial value. He will also study the operation of the economic factors that aid or obstruct the utilization of products developed by the laboratory.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter 66

THE WHISTLE blew. The side-wheels churned. The mail-boat chugged up-stream. The wake boiled after her. A stranger lifted the mail sack and slung it over his shoulder. Jody crouched on his heels, holding the bow of the dug-out. The stranger glanced at him and walked away toward Volusia with the mail. The first rays of the sun lay on the river. Alligator lilies on the far bank caught them like white cups. The current tugged at the dug-out. His arm was tired, holding it. The stranger's footsteps faded up the road. There was no place left to go, but Baxter's Island.

HE DROPPED into the canoe and took up his paddle. He paddled across to the west shore. He tethered the dug-out to a stake. He looked back across the river. The rising sun lay on the charred ruins of the Hutto house. His throat tightened. The world had discarded him. He turned and walked slowly up the road. He was weak, and conscious again of hunger, but the night's food had renewed him. The nausea was gone, and the pain.

He walked west without plan. There was no other direction in which to go. Baxter's Island drew him like a magnet. There was no reality but the clearing. He trudged on. He wondered if he dared go home. Probably they would not want him. He had caused them a great deal of trouble. Perhaps if he walked into the kitchen, his mother would drive him out as she had driven Flag. He was no good to anybody. He had prowled and played and eaten recklessly. They had put up with his impudence and his appetite. And Flag had destroyed the better part of the year's living. Almost certainly, they would feel they were better off without him, and he would not be welcome.

He loitered along the road. The sun was strong. The winter was over. He thought hazily that it must now be April. Spring had taken over the scrub, and the birds were mating and singing in the bushes. Only he, in all the world, was homeless. He had been out in the world, and the world was a troubled dream, fluid and desolate, flanked by swamps and cypresses. He stopped to rest in mid-morning at the intersection of the main road and the north road. The low vegetation here was open to the heat of the sun. His head began to ache and he got to his feet and headed north toward Silver Glen. He told himself that he did not mean to go home. He would only go to the spring, and go down between the cool dark banks, and lie a little while in the running water. The north road dipped and rose and dipped again. The sand was scalding under his bare feet. The sweat ran down the grime of his face. At the top of a rise, he could look down and see Lake George far below him to the east. It was pitilessly blue. Thin white lines were the implacable choppy waves that had turned him back to the unfriendly shore. He trudged on.

TO THE EAST, the vegetation became luxuriant. There was water near. He turned down the trail to Silver Glen. The steep bank dropped to the ribbon of creek that ran south of the great spring itself, and had a kindred source. He ached in all his bones. He was so thirsty that his tongue seemed glued to the roof of his mouth. He stumbled down the bank and fell flat beside the cool shallow water and drank. The water bubbled over his lips and nose. He drank until his belly was swollen. He felt sickened and rolled over on his back and closed his eyes. The nausea passed and he was drowsy. He lay in a stupor of weariness. He hung suspended in a timeless space. He could go neither forward nor back. Something was ended. Nothing was begun.

In the late afternoon, he roused. He sat up. An early magnolia blossom was wax-white over him.

He thought, "'Tis April."

A memory stirred him. He had come here a year ago, on a bland and tender day. He had splashed in the creek water and lain, as now, among the ferns and grasses. Something had been fine and lovely. He had built himself a flutter-mill. He rose and moved with a quickening of his pulse to the location. It seemed to him that if he found it, he would discover with it all the other things that had vanished. The flutter-mill was gone. The flood had washed it away, and all its merry turning.

He cut twigs for the supports, and the roller to turn across them, from the wild cherry tree. He whittled feverishly. He cut strips from a palmetto frond and made his paddles. He sunk the uprights in the stream bed and set the paddles turning. Up, over, down. Up, over, down. The flutter-mill was turning. The silver water dripped. But it was only palmetto strips brushing the water. There was no magic in the motion. The flutter-mill had lost its comfort.

He said, "Play-dolly——"

He kicked it apart with one foot. The broken bits floated down the creek. He threw himself on the ground and sobbed bitterly. There was no comfort anywhere.

THERE WAS PENNY. A wave of homesickness washed over him so that it was suddenly intolerable not to see him. The sound of his father's voice was a necessity. He longed for the sight of his stooped shoulders as he had never, in the sharpest of his hunger, longed for food. He clambered to his feet and up the bank and began to run down the road to the clearing, crying as he ran. His father might not be there. He might be dead. With the crops ruined, and his son gone, he might have packed up in despair and moved away and he would never find him.

He sobbed. "Pa—wait for me."

The sun was setting. He was in a panic that he would not reach the clearing before dark. He exhausted himself, and was obliged to slow down to a walk. His flesh quivered. His heart pounded. He had to stop entirely and rest. Darkness overtook him half a mile from home. Even in the dusk, landmarks were familiar. The tall pines of the clearing were recognizable, blacker than the creeping night. He came to the slat fence. He felt his way along it. He opened the gate and went into the yard. He passed around the side of the house to the kitchen stoop and stepped up on it. He crept to the window on bare silent feet and peered in.

A fire burned low on the hearth. Penny sat hunched beside it, wrapped in quilts. One hand covered his eyes. Jody went to the door and unlatched it and stepped inside. Penny lifted his head.

"Ory?"

"Hit's me."

He thought his father had not heard him.

"Hit's Jody."

Penny turned his head and looked at him wonderingly, as though the gaunt ragged boy with sweat and tear-streaks down the grime, with hollow eyes under matted hair, were some stranger of whom he expected that he state his business.

He said, "Jody."

"Come close."

He went to his father and stood beside him. Penny reached out for his hand and took it and turned it over and rubbed it slowly between his own. Jody felt drops on his hand like a warm rain.

"Boy—I near about give you out."

"You all right?"

He nodded.

"You all right—You ain't dead nor gone? You all right?" A light filled his face. "Glory be."

It was unbelievable, Jody thought. He was wanted.

Court to Use Simple English In Rent Cases

Streamlined Rules Adopted for Fall By Municipal Bench

Simple language and streamlined procedure will be the rule in the landlord and tenant branch of the Municipal Court, starting in September, the judges announced yesterday.

The reforms follow closely the pattern of those which proved successful in the small claims branch of the court. They have been advocated by the Washington Housing Association.

Tenats who cannot afford to draw up sworn statements of defense will be able to resist suits without them, under the new rules. Until now, a case was not set for trial until the statement was filed, so that many tenants lost cases which they might have been able to defend. Such persons, after next month, will be able to state their defense orally, without having to hire lawyers.

Court to Sit Hour Daily

The court will sit for an hour each day, instead of the present half an hour, so that parties will have more time to state their cases. A proposal that the court sit in the afternoon was rejected, although two judges were disposed to give it a trial.

The landlord and tenant cases have produced much of the court's income, because so many rent actions were filed. This will be reduced by cutting the filing cost from $1 to 85 cents, with further reduction possible later on.

The new rules give the judges discretion in charging costs to the parties in cases. Landlords have been accused, in some instances, of filing suit when rent was only a day or so overdue. Should such cases recur, the judges might make the landlord pay the costs, even if he won the case, if they thought his haste an imposition on the court.

"Terms" Abolished

The present rules forbid a judge to change his decree, on the basis of new evidence, after the three-month term of court expires. The new rules abolish the "terms" and establish the court as one of continuous session.

All papers in the landlord court will be issued in simple language. Instead of a formidable summons, starting with "The President of the United States, Greeting," those who are sued will receive a simple notice to appear and answer the suit filed by so-and-so.

The meeting of the judges which approved the reforms was attended by Presiding Judge George C. Aukam and Judges Nathan Cayton, Ellen K. Ready, Robert E. Mattingly and Armond Scott.

The new rules have been urged for three years by the Housing Association, headed by the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes. James A. Cobb, former municipal judge, was chairman of a committee which drafted the reforms and presented them to the municipal judges.

Gov. Price Denies Saying He Controls Va. Legislature

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—Gov. James H. Price, at his temporary summer home at Virginia Beach, denied yesterday he used the word "control" with reference to the legislature in a statement to reporters after his White House conference with President Roosevelt Monday, and said he "may make a corrective statement" later.

"I had control of the Legislature last year with a less friendly membership than I will have in the new Legislature."

Slightly less than one-half of the Senate and House of Delegates seats were affected in the August 1 Democratic primary.

Charles W. Jones Is Dead in Jersey

Word was received here yesterday of the death in Essex Fells, N. J., of Charles Warner Jones, former resident of Washington, whose father was the private secretary of Vice President Wheeler in the Hayes Administration. His death occurred July 30 in his summer residence at 260 Roseland avenue, Essex Fells. Mr. Jones had been associated with a bridge building concern for more than 20 years. He was a graduate of Eastern High School here, but had not resided here for more than two decades. The burial was in Essex Fells.
